Trouble on the Rio Grande Apprehended.

The Presidential Election.

MATAMORAS, Mexico, Aug. 4, via INDIANOLA, Texas, Aug. 11.—PALACIOS commanding the city and CORTINA commanding the line of the Rio Grande, are quarreling over depredations committed on the American side. A collision is feared, and preparations are making for it.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 6, via INDIANOLA, Texas, Aug. 11.—The opposition is gaining. LERDO has 2,237 electors, and DIAZ 1,076. The Diario officials says JUAREZ has 5,000. Troops have been sent to TUXTEPEC to put a stop to the outrages there.

THE INDIANS.

The Governor of Montana Asks for More Troops to Protect the Gallatin Valley.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The Secretary of the Interior today received a letter from the Governor of Montana Territory, in which, under date of Aug. 5, he briefly describes the panic said into Gallatin Valley, made, as he says, by fifty or sixty Crow Indians, and suggests that some action be taken by the authorities to protect said valley and prevent a stampede of its new pioneer settlers to the East, a result which would be very damaging to the future of Montana and the great North-west. A few more cavalry in the valley would, in the opinion of the Governor, make the citizens feel quite secure in the future. In behalf of these people he asks Secretary DELANO'S best efforts for their protection.

The People in the Frontier to be Protected—Letter from President Grant.

From the Marshall (Texas) Weekly.

Hon. J. W. FLANAGAN, United States Senator from Texas, while in Washington City, just prior to the adjournment of the last session of Congress, received from Mr. G. W. KENDRICK, a prominent merchant of San Antonio, an arrow taken from the body of a white man killed by the Indians within eighteen miles of San Antonio. Senator FLANAGAN handed the arrow to President GRANT, with a statement from Mr. KENDRICK as to the alarming depredations of the Indians in that section. A few days afterward he received the following letter from the President in his own hand-writing, which letter is now in the possession of the editor of this paper:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, May 22, 1871.

Hon. J. W. Flanagan, U. S. S.:

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of the arrow which you send me as from the body of a man killed by Indians within sight of San Antonio, together with the statement of G. W. KENDRICK as to the great number of outrages that have been committed by the Indians on the people of North-western Texas. It is my desire and intention to get all the wild Indians upon reservations where they can be cared for and kept from the white settlements. But, under any circumstances, the citizens must be protected. I shall direct the commanding officer in Texas to give the proper orders to secure that end.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT.

This letter is a complete refutation of the statements made by the political foes of the National Administration, that President GRANT was not in accord with the State authorities in their efforts to put an end to the Indian outrages on our border. Senator FLANAGAN informed us that the President ever manifested the warmest sympathy for the people of this frontier, and declared his intention to make every effort to protect them from the depredations of Indians—wild or "Reserve."

BUFFALO PARK RACES.

Goldsmith Maid Makes the Fastest Time on Record in Three Straight Heats—Judge Brigham, a New Horse, Wins the First Heat, and Sells on the Ground for $100,000.

BUFFALO, Aug. 11.—The last day of the sixth annual meeting of the Buffalo Driving Park closed today. Goldsmith Maid making the fastest time on record in three straight heats by one-quarter second. The weather was cool and pleasant. Over 20,000 persons were on the ground. Had the Park Association reduced the admission fee to fifty cents, full 50,000 persons would have enlivened the scene. While a majority of the crowd were drawn in anticipation of a close contest between Goldsmith Maid, Lucy, and American Girl, and amply repaid in the result, yet, contrary to all expectation, the 2:40 race proved equally as interesting and exciting. Judge Brigham, a comparatively new horse, making a splendid record, winning the race in four heats, making the first quarter in 31 seconds, and the half in 1:03. Immediately after winning the race, the owner of Judge Brigham was sent for, and the horse was bought by GEORGE C. HALL for $30,000 for JAY GOULD, of Erie fame. The purchaser says $100,000 will not buy him today. Judge Brigham is a bay stallion, eight years old, by RYSDYKS' Hambletonian, out of Lady Sandford, by American Star.

The first race called was the 2:40. Thirteen horses entered and six started—Dexter, Lecan, Huntress, Long Branch, Sentinel, Ed Huggins and Clara S. drawn. Over three-quarters of an hour was lost in scoring before the horses got a good send-off. Judge Fullerton took the lead and kept it round the track in the first heat, hard pressed by Brigham. The three following straights heats were won by Brigham. The race was highly interesting, and intensely exciting. After leaving the half-mile pole on the last heat, Brigham broke, Fullerton shooting twenty lengths ahead. The spectators were breathless with excitement when Brigham came down to a trot, overtaking Fullerton at the three-quarter post, and coming in half a length ahead.

SUMMARY.

PURSE No. 5—$5,000, for horses that never trotted better than 2:40; $3,000, $1,000, $700 and $300:

Judge Brigham	3	1	1	1
Judge Fullerton	1	2	2	2
J. H. Burke	2	3	3	3
Ashland Pet	4	4	4	dr.
Frank Herbert	5	dis.
Vosburg	6	dis.

Time—2:24¼, 2:25, 2:24¼, 2:23½.

The great race of the day was trotted alternately with the 2:40 race. The three heats of Goldsmith Maid were trotted without a skip or break until the last heat, when she was crowded from the beginning to the end by Lucy, who lapped her throughout, after one of the most closely contested heats ever witnessed. Then she only made two quick breaks, one at the start and one on the homestretch. On coming to start on the second heat the left rein of Goldsmith Maid broke, and the mare started to run, when BUDD DOBLE, her driver, performed an astonishing feat by seizing the back-strap, jumping astride the mare's back, seizing the check-rein and bringing her to a standstill before she had gone many lengths beyond the judges' stand. This incident won additional laurels for DOBLE and his thoroughly-bred animal.

SUMMARY.

PURSE No. 3—$5,000, for all horses; $2,000, $1,000, $500, and $1,500 additional to the horse making the fastest time, providing it beats Dexter's time, 2:17¼.

Goldsmith Maid	1	1	1
Lucy	2	2	2
American Girl	3	3	3

Time—2:19¼, 2:19¼, 2:21.

THE SARATOGA RACES.

Interesting Events Promised — Painful Absent Knuckles—Longfellow to Meet Other Good Horses.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 11.—The great four-mile race, to be run here during the meeting which is to commence on the 16th inst., promises to be one of great interest. Notwithstanding the painful rumor that Longfellow has gone amiss, Longfellow will have to contend with the best two five-year olds in America, Helmbold and Barney Williams, both distinguished winners at four miles. Helmbold is well known, but Barney Williams, having been run only in the West and South, is not so generally known in the North. After his victory for the great Post stake, four mile heats, at St. Louis, a month ago, he came here to try conclusions with the flyers. The one-forty time had astonished the public. Barney is a chestnut, over sixteen hands high, and a powerful animal. His sire was the distinguished stallion Lexington, and his dam the great racer Vandal. The races will be unusually interesting. The first race on the programme is the Kenner Stakes for three-year olds, and will be one of great interest, as eight or ten horses will start, including Harry Bassett, Alroy, Moselle, Abdel Kader, John Merryman, Nellie Benson, Nathan Oaks, &c. On the same day the Summer handicap, two and a quarter miles, will come off. The steeple-chase, for which nineteen horses are handicapped, will take place on the 17th. Already great interest is taken here in the issue of the races, and wagers are making quite freely on the results of the four-mile race.

The Longfellow-Kingfisher Race.

The rumor that caused so much excitement among sporting men, on Thursday afternoon, to the effect that Kingfisher had been withdrawn, turns out to be correct. Mr. JAMES E. KERR, of this City, received a telegram from Saratoga, yesterday afternoon, stating that Kingfisher's leg gave out during a run before daybreak on Monday morning, and he has not been on the stable since. The leg had been ailing all the year, and prevented Kingfisher from winning the Travers Stakes. The severe training necessary for the four-mile dash with Longfellow completely disabled Kingfisher.

KENTUCKY.

Lesley's Majority in Forty Counties Less by 27,000 Than the Democratic Majority of 1869.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 11.—Full returns from fifty counties are received, which show LESLEY'S majority to be 37,532 less in those counties than that of STEVENSON, (Democrat,) in 1869. Notwithstanding the fact, LESLEY'S total vote in the same counties is greater than STEVENSON'S. The difference in the majorities, therefore, is due to the increase of the Republican vote since 1869, largely from the colored population who had not then been enfranchised.

MISSISSIPPI.

The State Politics—Gov. Alcorn Opens the Campaign with a Speech—The Republican State Convention.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 11.—Gov. ALCORN has made the opening speech of the campaign at Vicksburg. He will speak again to-morrow in North Mississippi. Both political parties are making active preparations for the coming campaign. The Democracy are holding enthusiastic county meetings; and as the election is for county officers and legislators, there will be no State Convention. The Republicans will hold a State Convention on the 30th. The Pilot, the leading Republican paper, warns the party against sending ALCORN'S appointees to the Convention, and urges that men be sent who are under no obligation to him. It charges that an attempt has been made already to pack the Convention, and that ALCORN'S speech at Vicksburg was about himself and what he had done to build up the party in Mississippi, entirely ignoring the thousands of hard-working and true Republicans. The Pilot says:

"He greatly fears that he would be nobody in the estimation of the people if he were not constantly held up to them as a most wonderful man. To gratify this passion, he interfered with the public printing, stopped the publishing of the code and other laws by the exercise of the appointing power, and has thrown a firebrand into the Republican ranks in the form of a newspaper, which it becomes necessary for him to sustain by making public speeches in its behalf."

The Bridges on the Maine Central Railroad to be Examined by a Committee of Directors.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 11.—The Directors of the Maine Central Railroad held a meeting this afternoon and appointed a Committee to examine all once personally, with a competent engineer, every bridge on the line in the most thorough manner. The station agent at Bangor has been directed to continue to furnish medical attendance and every comfort to the wounded at the expense of the Company.

The Coroners continued their investigation of the railroad disaster today. A number of witnesses were examined; among them Superintendent NOYES of the Maine Central, and Messrs. WILDES and CARSER of the Railroad Commission. The evidence showed that the decayed state of the bridge caused the disaster, but it does not appear that the bridge was known to be rotten, either to the officers of the road or the Railroad Commissioners, although Col. WILDES testified to having inspected the bridge in June. He then gave orders to have the bridge strengthened, not from any particular apparent weakness, but because of the greater strain to which it has been subjected by heavier trains which it has been carrying of late. The investigation is being conducted in a thorough and searching manner.

The Sunday Question Agitated in Cincinnati Again.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—The ordinance passed by the Councilmen last week, repealing the Sunday ordinances, was rejected by the Aldermen today—12 to 11—without debate. It is claimed by the Sabbath-keeping men that one or two members would have voted against the repeal who voted against the rejection of the ordinance, believing that it was better that the ordinance should be received and pass through the regular course of legislation than to be rejected at once. A resolution to request the Mayor to enforce the Sunday law was tabled—13 to 9.

The Yacht Squadron in the East.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—The New-York Yacht Club will visit this city to-morrow to view the objects of interest, and will dine with the Eastern Yacht Club at Tufts Point Shirley in the afternoon. On Sunday they will have religious services on one of the yachts, and on Monday the grand regatta will take place, the start being made from Swampscott,

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

A Malicious Insinuation Finally Disposed of.

The Rest of the Two Hundred Millions of the New Loan Absolutely Sold—The New State Department Building.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The remainder of the $200,000,000 of the new loan is not turned over to JAY COOKE & Co. to be disposed of, as one of your contemporaries announced, meaning to say that Mr. BOURWELL has failed in the negotiation directly, and that the bankers are to try it for him. The bankers take absolutely the balance of the amount, after the national banks have had the opportunity to make subscriptions. They will dispose of it just as they do any other securities on their own account, and not the account of the Government. As to the terms on which it is taken, the law prevents any extraordinary inducements from being held out, by limiting the expenses to the Treasury to one-half of one per cent. By no possible contingency is any of this $200,000,000 to be left on the hands of the Government.

THE NEW STATE DEPARTMENT.

BODWELL & Co., of Maine, to whom was awarded the contract for the granite of the basement story of the new State Department, have given heavy bonds to deliver the whole quantity, already cut, prior to Jan. 1. The excavations for the cellar are completed, and the laying of concrete has begun. The plans for the granite-work were sent to the contractors on Saturday, and are now in their hands. It is proper to say in this connection that the stone-cutting has been awarded to the same parties who furnish the granite, instead of the companies doing the same work for the Boston and New-York Post-offices, as was recently mistakenly stated. It is, however, to be done on the same terms and conditions as in the case of those buildings.

OUR MINISTER TO VENEZUELA.

Gen. PILE, of Missouri, is in this City. He is soon to leave the country to assume his duties as Carracas, the capital of Venezuela, as our Minister to that Government.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

DECISION OF MINERS' RIGHTS.

In the matter of THOMAS H. BULGER vs. The Citizens of Central City, Colorado, involving important questions as to the right of a claimant under the Mining act to a patent for a mineral lode beneath the town site of Central City, Assistant Attorney-General WALTER H. SMITH has given an opinion in answer to certain questions: First, that the possession of the surface by the citizens is an adverse claim which entitles them to a hearing in the local Courts before patents can issue to the mineral claimants; second, that where an adverse claim to an application for a mining patent is filed, the proceedings in the local Courts required by the statutes should be commenced by the adverse claimants, unless they should be in actual possession of the whole or a portion of the premises for which a patent is applied for. In the case referred to, the citizens of the city being in possession are made the defendants.

PRE-EMPTION OF TOWN SITES.

The Acting Secretary of the Interior has rendered a decision in the case of JOHN SLOSSON vs. The Town Site of Salt Lake City, on an appeal from the decision of the General Land Office, affirming the decision of that office, to the effect that when lands have been selected for municipal purposes, under the Town Site law, prior to a pre-emption settlement, the pre-emption claim must be rejected. The controversy in this case has been strongly contested, and has involved considerable ill-feeling.

INTERNATIONAL POSTAL CURRENCY.

The convention for the interchange of postal money-orders between Great Britain and the United States, having been duly ratified, will go into effect on the 2d day of October next, and the Post-office Department has now completed preliminary arrangements for its practical operation. Of the 2,453 money-order offices of this country 970 have been authorized to issue postal orders on the Postmaster at New-York City, for payment in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and to pay orders issued by him for same certified by the Post-office Department of that country for payment in the United States. These offices have been selected in all the States and Territories with a view of accommodating the localities where the greatest number of such foreigners reside as will be likely to make use of them. All exchanges are to be made through the two Government exchange offices in New-York and London. In this country, applications can be made only for the equivalent in sterling of a certain sum of money in United States currency, which latter amount being deposited at the local office, is transmitted to New-York, and there converted into a postal sterling draft at the current rate for gold on the day of its receipt. This draft is made payable by the British authorities in any designated locality of the Kingdom. No single order will be issued for more than $50, but persons desiring to remit larger sums can obtain additional money-orders. The rates of commission on these money-orders will be as follows:

On orders not exceeding $10	25
Over $10 and not exceeding $20	50
Over $20 and not exceeding $30	75
Over $30 and not exceeding $40	$1 00
Over $40 and not exceeding $50	1 25

A SAD CASE.

Attempted Suicide of a Young German Druggist—Grief for the Loss of His Wife the Cause.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Aug. 11.—A sad case of attempted suicide occurred here today. Seven or eight weeks ago, HERMAN SCHULTZ, a young German druggist, came here from New-York to take charge of a drug-store, No. 146 Main-street. He left his young wife, who was then expecting, with the understanding that she too should come to Poughkeepsie when he was established. He at once assumed control of the store, and matters went on smoothly with him, till he received a telegram from New-York, stating that his wife was dying, and that he must hurry down if he would see her alive. This affected him deeply, and he made haste to depart, saying if she died he would never be back. She died, and it is said that immediately after he attempted to kill himself. His friends prevailed on him to return to this city and resume his business. He boarded with Dr. KESSLER, but slept in the store below, so that the lawyer went to dinner as usual, and repaired to the store, Dr. KESSLER following in a few moments. When the latter, however, arrived at the store, SCHULTZ was nowhere to be found, and search was at once made for him. By traces of vomit on the stairway he was tracked to his room over the store, where he was discovered lying on a bed in great pain, but able to articulate faintly. Near the bed was a table on which were two vials, one partially filled with laudanum, and the other containing a small quantity of arsenic. A piece of paper on the table bore in pencil, in German, the following, addressed to Dr. KESSLER'S wife:

MRS. KESSLER: I can live no longer; I must go too. Farewell! I go to my wife. H. S.

Please send this letter (one inclosed) to Dresden, Please don't. But I pray you not to let my parents know. Tell them I was accidentally drowned while bathing. I feel the poison. Farewell! I thank you for all your kindness. There is no I have to get yet. Give it to ALBE. Then buy him a dress, black and white, to remember me.

The ALBE referred to is Dr. KESSLER'S babe. The poor young man is still alive, but the chances are that he will die. All this afternoon he has called after his wife frequently, exclaiming, "EMILY, I come!" The greatest sympathy is felt for him, and every effort is being made to save him. There is but LITTLE hope.

ROWING.

Preparations of the Ward Brothers for the Saratoga Regatta.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CORNWALL ON THE HUDSON, Friday, Aug. 11, 1871.

There is life and activity at the "Josh Ward House," today. Josh and his brothers have buckled on their armor for the Saratoga regatta. They commenced training for the event yesterday, and one can see by the sparkle of their eyes that they mean business. Hearty, robust-looking fellows, all of them. JOSH looks as young today as he ever did in the whole course of his life. They have just received the old four-oared shell-boat Flying Fields, from Newburg, which they will use temporarily. Everybody in the aquatic world knows the Ward crew. At the Saratoga race they will row as follows:

HANK WARD, stroke; he is forty-three years of age, and weighs, today, 165 pounds; he grows with health, and has enormous hands. JOSH WARD will sit behind him. He is the JOSH of yore—head a little one side and eye salant; he is but thirty-three years of age, and weighs 178 pounds, the heaviest one of the four; he has taken good care of himself, and looks as lithe and as agile as he was ten years ago. Behind him will sit GILBERT WARD; he is thirty years of age, and weighs 169 pounds. ELLIS WARD will sit in the bow; he is twenty-four years of age, and weighs 155 pounds. All of their weights will be reduced by the severe training which they are to undergo. They are already down to plain diet. They rise in the morning at 6, and wash, carrying a slight stick, walks briskly, five miles before breakfast. After breakfast a siesta is taken till rowing time comes, when they take a pull of five miles up or down the Hudson. Then follows the rubbing-down process, after which comes dinner, and then another rest till the water in the Highlands is partially wrapped in shade, when another five-mile walk and another five-mile row occurs. At 9 P. M. regularly they repair to their couches to get that rest which their hard day's work has fitted them for. "Do you have no one to train you, JOSH?" said we. "No, I want no trainer around here," was the reply. "I am trainer enough. I know what is wanted, and my brothers are true. We propose to take no chances in this matter. I consider the Saratoga regatta the most important one I ever entered my crew for. There is one chance in many for us, and that's the chance we are going for. No, no, we can do our training. I've paid for my experience in that line, and mean this time to profit by it."

REPORTER—What about the New-York crew, the Biglin crew, JOSH?

JOSH—I have never received any word from them.

REPORTER—It has been telegraphed over the country that they have sent you a letter in which they offered to row their crew against your crew between now and September, the winning crew to enter the Saratoga regatta as the American crew or the champions of America.

JOSH—I have never received a word from any of the Biglin crew or any notification whatever, by mail, telegraph, or messenger, upon the subject. The first I knew of any such proposal was in a dispatch in the Poughkeepsie Eagle, dated New-York. In reply to that, I have to say this: We don't propose to row any matches previous to the Saratoga race, from the fact that we are at present all out of train, having just commenced to enter into a race within ten days for the championship of America. It would therefore be extremely absurd. We hold that championship now, and do not, by our own foolishness, propose to lose it, but if Mr. BIGLIN and his party propose to row the Ward crew in a match race, they can make a match for $1,000 or upward, the race to take place on the Wednesday following the Saratoga regatta, and over the same course. We are ready now to put up forfeit on such a contest. We have authorized a gentleman to enter us for the Saratoga regatta.

REPORTER—That's square talk, JOSH.

JOSH—Well, that's business.

REPORTER—Judging from all reports the Biglin crew are working hard to win next month.

JOSH—Oh! we don't care for that crew; we're going for higher game. There is no crew that will bother us there, except the Tyne crew. They are the ones we are going for. They are splendid pullers, and the chances are against us. Why, that Biglin crew don't amount to anything. We could go with one now and beat them as soft as we are, but we are going to attend to business. We don't propose to allow England to carry off the honors at Saratoga, if we can prevent it. Nothing whatever will lead us into a contest with any American crew before the Saratoga race is decided. We shall pug the fifteen and let the American crews take care of themselves.

REPORTER—That's commendable, JOSH, and speaks well for you.

JOSH—You see there's considerable honor at stake in this thing. It is certainly evident that the WARD boys will allow nothing to interfere with them in this matter. Each and every one of us will speak freely upon the subject, all holding the opinion that the Tyne crew will be their hottest rivals.

GEORGE ROAHR, of New-York City, has just completed a splendid four-oared shell for the WARDS. They will row the race at Saratoga in it. It is to arrive here to-morrow. It is built of Spanish cedar, is 42 feet in length, 18 inches in width, and 8½ inches in depth. The oars are 12 feet 2 inches in length. The WARD boys will leave here for Saratoga on the 1st of September with their boat, and take up quarters as near the lake as possible, where they will immediately resume their training. They are going into the regatta, on their own "hook," unaided by anybody. They will work for victory as hard as they ever worked in their lives, and if they win, it will be the crowning event of their already victorious aquatic life. In them the Tyne crew will find no second-rate rivals, and if the Englishmen win, they will be turned so closely that the time will, without doubt, be the quickest on record. If the forthcoming regatta will be really an international affair, I am of the opinion that America's interests will be well cared for by the WARDS.

The Druggists' Board of Examiners.

Reply of the Druggists' College of Pharmacy.

The following letter, in reply to one recently received from the Druggists' Board of Examiners, has been sent to that body by the Druggists' College of Pharmacy:

NEW-YORK, Aug. 11, 1871.

GENTLEMEN: Having received a communication from your honorable body, in reply to a petition presented by the undersigned with other graduates of College of Pharmacy in business in the City of New-York, and which has been duly forwarded to the Secretary of the meeting at which the petition was adopted, it appears only proper to state the reason for the opinion taken by the undersigned in the matter. The signers of that petition were men who had spent both time and means in the pursuit of both scientific and practical attainments in their profession, and after having reached the point at which the results of their labors were recognized by a diploma from an institution regularly incorporated by the Legislature of the State, it seemed ungenerous, not to say unjust, that a law should come into operation which would certainly ignore even the existence of an institution such as the College of Pharmacy, and thus make its evidences of professional standing, and place the holders of those evidences on an intellectual and moral par with those who might be entirely ignorant even of the first principles which should govern the practice of pharmacy. On the receipt of further information in regard to the points of the statute bearing on the question, the undersigned arrived at the conclusion expressed in their petition, that the law was explicit and admitted of but one course of action. They then immediately presented themselves before the Board of Examiners, and have since been notified that the examination was satisfactory. This they did because the law was imperative on the subject, not that they considered the diploma of the College of Pharmacy as any the less conclusive evidence of fitness for the practice of the profession. Thanking each and every member of the Board for their uniform courtesy, we remain, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

JOHN M. DOMAR,
JAMES G. BEACH,
FRED. J. BRETTMAN.

Gen. COWAN, Acting Secretary of the Interior, left for Ohio last evening. During his absence, Assistant Attorney-General SMITH will be acting Secretary.

THE HARBOR-MASTERS.

Another Batch of Accused Officials.

How the Harbor-Masters Swell their Salaries—The Injured Merchants and the Serviceable Tug-Boat Companies—Some Facts that Challenge Correction—The Wants of Commerce of the Port of New-York.

It seems now to be an admitted fact that there is no class of our business community more thoroughly and scandalously imposed upon by local officials than the large ship-owners and foreign importers. From the time that their vessels take their pilot off Sandy Hook, inward bound, until they discharge him on the voyage out, they are bled in turn by the pilots, the Quarantine authorities, the Boat-Wardens, and finally by the Harbor-Masters. The TIMES has recently laid before the people a full report of the extortions practiced by the Quarantine officials.

THE HARBOR-MASTERS.

It would naturally be thought by those who have read the Quarantine exposures that nothing in our port exactions would be likely to rival them; but we present today a series of charges against another regularly-organized system of over-charge, and which fully equals in rapacity that of the Health Department at Staten Island. The coterie, which exacts fresh tribute from the commerce of New-York, is composed of the Harbor-masters, all appointed by Gov. HOFFMAN. These officials secure their appointments through political influence. The law requires that five at least should be Captains of vessels, yet it is a well-known fact that some of the Harbor-Masters came from the interior of the State, had never seen a full-rigged ship before in their lives, and actually did not know what end of a canal-boat was the first to enter a ship. Their names and districts are as follows:

First District—C. C. ELLIS, South-street, corner of Jefferson. District extends from Pier No. 41 up East River.

Second District—WM. PENOYER, No. 103 South-street. District extends from Pier No. 25 to No. 40 East River.

Third District—JOHN C. SUTDAM, No. 25 South-street. District extends from Pier No. 19 to No. 25 East River.

Fourth District—THOMAS H. PERKINS, No. 69 South-street. District extends from Pier No. 13 to No. 19 East River.

Fifth District—JOSEPH BRICE, No. 19 South-street. District extends from Pier No. 9 to No. 13 East River.

Sixth District—ANDREW S. HALE, south corner of Moore-street. District extends from Whitehall to Pier No. 8 East River.

Seventh District—JOHN W. BROWN, No. 69 West-street. District extends from the Battery to Pier No. 9 North River.

Eighth District—J. H. BELL, No. 91 West-street. District extends from Pier No. 9 to No. 36 North River.

Ninth District—S. SAMMONS, No. 22 Duane-street. District extends from Piers Nos. 36 to 48, North River.

Tenth District—EDWARD KENNEY, No. 284 West-street. District extends from Pier No. 48 to the North River.

THE MODES OPERANDI.

By law the Harbor-Masters are authorized to collect one-half cent per ton on all vessels entering the port. This is paid generally at the Custom-house by the owners of the vessels, and there collected by the State officials. Another law provides that no vessel can be moved while under the jurisdiction of the State of New-York, without first obtaining permission from the Harbor-Master in whose district the vessel may chance to be. Upon this little clause hangs the whole secret of the gains of the entire body, consisting of the New-York Harbor-Masters, and the power which it gives they have used with tolerable effect to serve their personal ends. It is a most remarkable fact that rarely, if ever, can the Harbor-Masters be seen at their offices, and never when a Captain is seeking a berth for his vessel at the pier. All transactions are invariably performed by a third party, who is generally the Captain of the tow-boat which is to take the vessel up to her berth. All of these tow-boats are in the employ of contractors, who are given the monopoly of the towage of all vessels in the harbor, in consideration, it is said, of the payment to the Harbor-Masters of two-thirds at least of the overcharge for towage received from the ship-owner. It is further alleged that the Harbor-Master will not give his permission for the removal of a vessel unless the first shipping agent who is to perform the towage, and, it is not necessary to add, that none other than one of his friends is ever allowed the privilege. If the Captain of a vessel offers any resistance to this little arrangement, they simply leave him, and his vessel remains in the stream until he comes to reason. If a vessel lies at the pier over forty-eight hours, an express agreement is generally said to be made for an increased fee to the Harbor-Master, frequently amounting to $70 and $80, which bill, of course, is collected under the name of towage. A charge of not less than $20 is made by these favored of the Harbor-Masters for simply moving a vessel the distance of a block, from one pier to another, when it should not be over $5. When remonstrated with by the ship-owners we are credibly informed that the tub-boatmen invariably reply that they would tow the vessels for a reasonable compensation, but they are ordered to make the above charges, and that the Harbor-Masters may pocket the excess.

ILLICIT SALES OF SHIPS' BERTHS.

When a foreign vessel comes into port and is likely to remain some time, her owner is obliged to negotiate with the tug-boatman—the Harbor-Master he can never find—the number of days she is to lie at the dock, and agree that in consideration of his services in obtaining a berth for the vessel at once, the tug-boatman is to perform all the towage of the ship as long as she remains in the harbor, in addition to this, the Harbor-Master is always expected to receive the extra sum of $70 or $80. A case in point is that of the ship St. Mark, which arrived here a few days ago. Certain tug-boatmen in the service of the Harbor-Master got hold of the St. Mark, and carried her captive to Pier No. 54 East River, the owners of the vessel were, by the well-known course of pressure, induced to sign an agreement by which they consented to give the tug-boatmen in question all the towage of the St. Mark while in port, and $75 per month in advance so long as the vessel retained her berth.

THE HARBOR-MASTER & CO.

The following are the tug-boatmen who are understood to be on good terms with the Harbor-Masters:

PARKER & GIBBS, No. 49 South-street.
WILLIAM MARSHALL, No. 69 South-street.
CHAMBERLAIN & HUBLEY, Nos. 88 and 168 South-street.
C. P. RAYMOND, No. 251 South-street.
JACOB HENION, West-street.

SUGGESTIVE FIGURES.

It is said that on an average each Harbor-Master has the control of from twenty-five to thirty-five vessels a day in his own district, but we will take at both the minimum and call it twenty vessels. It has been shown where the great bulk of the money exacted for towage goes, and not one of the twenty vessels which were taken for example has been charged less than $20, and the great majority have been mulcted in nearly double that amount. The rate of $20 we have a warrant for, and $60 per week Harbor-Masters, not one of which he is supposed to pay the tug-boatmen one-third or $200, leaving in the hands of the harbor official the net income daily of $400, or $146,000 per annum. To put it in another way, the tug-boat agents of the two Harbor-Masters of the City of New-York, levy tax of not less than a $1,350,000 for work that hundreds would be only too glad to perform for less than $500,000. This is the minimum estimate. The representative of the TIMES was yesterday informed by a large shipowner that the above amounts were in his estimation, but half what they should be, and that, in addition to the legitimate fees, between two and three millions would be a more reliable approximation of the amount received annually from the shipping of the port of New-York by its two Harbor-Masters. It seems to be a lucky circumstance that the above state of affairs does not exist in Brooklyn, or, between the Harbor-Masters and the Quarantine authorities, there would be caused an instantaneous instead of a gradual destruction of the commerce of the port.

THE LAST RESORT.

Brooklyn, they say, is now the only haven of refuge, and its freedom from the extortions of the harbor officials has had the effect of driving to the east side every vessel that arrives here, that can get a berth there, to unload. Indeed, it is authentically stated that the amount saved by escaping from the grasp of the officials on this side of the river is always sufficient to prevent the vessel's suffering actual loss on her venture.

With the commerce of this great sea-port crippled by the worst form of extortion and plunder, and the evil on the increase instead of abatement, is it to be wondered that even the great natural advantages which the City of New-York possesses as a market will not overbalance long its growing demerits as a port of entry.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

The Sioux City (Wis.) Times, of the 9th inst., publishes an anonymous letter addressed to Gen. HANCOCK, charging Messrs. PECK and BOWMAN, who have charge of all the trading posts on the Upper Missouri, with gross frauds. The letter winds up by asking the Government officials to take them by the throat, with the assurance of the military authorities.

The new boat for the St. John crew, built by Mr. ELMORE, of New-York, was launched yesterday. It is 100 feet as wide as the old boat. PRICE has recovered, and taken his place again. PERCY, of the Tyne crew, who had been scratched from Saturday's contest, is well again. They were beating in going on, but the backers of the St. John crew are more confident.

The Directors of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad Companies, in a joint resolution adopted at Duluth, yesterday, decided to enter at once upon an extensive system of harbor improvements, including the completion of the canal, deepening of the bay and the construction of permanent docks at Duluth, Minn.

At Belvidere, Ill., Thursday night, during a heavy thunder-storm, three burglars undertook to enter the counting-room of M. S. LEONARD'S warehouse. GEORGE TUTTLE, an employe, shot one of them in the mouth and through the arm, and knocked the other assailant to the floor. The third fled. The two injured burglars are now in jail.

Detective HARRIGAN, who has been working up the robbery of the United States Express delivery wagon in St. Louis last month, discovered, yesterday, the $60,000 worth of Kansas Pacific Railroad bonds, which comprised much the larger part of the booty, finding them in the woods just outside the city.

The fire at Emigrant Gap, on the Central Pacific Railroad, destroyed from a half to three-quarters of a mile of the snow-sheds along the road, and delayed the trains twelve hours. The station buildings were burned so quickly that the occupants barely escaped.

Supervisor DUTCHER is in Washington, in consultation with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with reference to business matters in his district. Measures are under consideration to vigorously enforce the laws in Brooklyn, and reform the detective force.

The New-York Yacht Club arrived at the rendezvous near Minot's Light, yesterday morning, and were there joined by the Eastern Club. The New-Yorkers were escorted up to the Quarantine grounds, and in the afternoon the whole party, number about 100, dined at Point Shirley.

The tannery of C. BURKHARDT, in Canal-street, Cleveland, was destroyed by fire on Thursday night. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $9,500—in the following companies: Sun, $2,000; Cleveland, $2,000; Allemannia, $1,500; State Fire, $3,000.

In regard to the postponement of the Vanderpool trial, the grand Rapids (Mich.) Eagle denies the report that the defendant lacks means of subpœnaing witnesses, as an order was made by Judge HOYT to have all of his witnesses summoned.

The brig Josephine, of Brunswick, Me., Capt. ISAAC S. SINSCOTT, went ashore on Sand Island, off Mission on Thursday. The vessel will probably prove a total loss, as the cargo, which consists of 700 barrels of flour for St. John.

Thursday night, at Rockford, Ill., a negro named SMITH committed an outrage upon the daughter of Rev. E. M. WALTERS, aged eleven years. The excitement among the citizens in consequence is intense, and they talk of lynching the wretch.

Three infants, said to have been farmed out to JULIA CALLAHAN, an old woman, in East Cambridge, Mass., have died recently. The woman is under arrest on suspicion of killing them with opium, and a Coroner's jury is investigating the case.

Postmaster-General CRESWELL arrived in Washington yesterday, and left in the evening to fill an engagement to dine with Presidents GRANT at the residence of Ex-Senator CAMERON, near Camden, N. J.

An application from New-Madrid County, Missouri, for protection against the KUKLUX was recently made to Gov. BROWN, but there was not the least occasion, says the St. Louis Republican, for Executive interference.

At two o'clock, yesterday morning, a fire in Rondout, N. Y., destroyed the stable and dwelling-house of EDWARD O'REILLY, and the barn of a German named SCHWARTZ. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

The Supreme Council of the Templars of Honor and Temperance closed its sessions yesterday at St. Louis. The next session will be held at Erie, Penn., on the third Tuesday of August, 1872.

Representatives of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company arrived at Louisville yesterday to consolidate the transfer of the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis Railroad to that Company, which will be done today.

THE LATE COMMUNE.

Sketches of the Leaders by a Partial Hand—A Tribute to Delescluze and His Associates.

Over the signature of "A Communalist," several articles have appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette in justification of the aims and acts of the Commune. The latest refers wholly to the leaders, and we reproduce it as interesting still, though written with so much too apparent bias to have extreme partiality for a motive. The writer begins thus:

THE ACCUSATIONS.

Permit me now to say a few words upon the principal men of the Commune. The current account concerning their private life is, to use a mild expression, singularly erroneous, and proves once more the weakness of reactionists: for their attacks are directed upon the personal in preference to the responsible. When political antagonism degenerates into personalities, and libel takes the place of frank and assimilatory word polemic—when one of the parties dives into his enemy's private life, and emerges from it with the assertion that he is a thief, and draws from his victorious assertion the consequence that the cause sustained by him must be in accordance with his personal value—discussion becomes no more than Jonathan and Ephraim quarrelling about who have persistently slandered the insurrectional leaders of Paris. This tactic, it is true, is a common one. Looking to past terrible wars and to the after a revolution, one leading man whose private character has not been sullied in the most abominable manner. After 1848, LEDRU-ROLLIN and LOUIS BLANC and to endure, after the 4th of September it was GAMBETTA—that model of honesty, disinterestedness and patriotism. Now comes the turn of the members of the Commune. DELESCLUZE is a convict. GAMBON a speculator, FELIX PYAT a jail-bird, VERMOREL and VALLÈS Bonapartist spies, RIGAULT a brave delighting in bloodshed, FERRÉ a degraded libertine, one of those carnivorous animals not yet classed in the Zoological Gardens, the two DOMBROWSKIS mercenaries, MIOT a thief, TRIDON a money-seeker, JOURDE a cashier who had run away with his master's strong-box, DUVAL and FLOURENS raving madmen, VESINIER an unreasonable, muddled man who had always been unable to distinguish between meum and tuum, COURBET, the painter, a systematic destroyer of works of art, and all generally inspired with a thirst for destruction rather difficult to explain. VARLIN was found with 875,000 in his pockets, (even in the bank-notes he must have had a mania to carry them,) BILLIORAY was taken in the same circumstances, &c. Is it necessary to say that these accusations are groundless? DELESCLUZE was not a convict; TRIDON, GAMBON and RIGAULT were rich men; VERMOREL and VALLÈS (who both died bravely) were not informers; and the "ferocious" MILLIÈRE was not ferocious at all. Without speaking of the improbability of two spies voluntarily dying for a cause which they hated, and of that man being a monster who fell with the cry of "Vive l'humanité!" I defy anybody to prove the charges of dishonesty against the Communal leaders whom I have mentioned. The CAUSSIDIÈRE, on the contrary, showed itself strictly honest, and gave a signal proof of it when, dying, concerning an ex-sutler a man named BLANCHET, who under the name of Panille had committed fraudulent bankruptcy, it ordered his arrest and formally expelled him from the Hôtel de Ville as unworthy of the mandate which his electors had given him. Whenever I have in the slightest doubt as to the antecedents of any of the members, his colleagues, both for his sake and for their own, made a strict inquiry concerning his private life. A fact was suspected, arrested, and inquired, and it was the same with CLUSERET. To refute minutely what has been alleged against each of those much calumniated men would be too long. I hope however, to give a short sketch of the political careers of those who were the most bitterly impeached, being the principal figures of the revolution.

TRIBUTE TO DELESCLUZE.

To the noble-hearted DELESCLUZE belongs the first place, and I cannot really recall his memory without deep emotion. To him especially I think it my duty to render a tribute of respect and admiration, and also to say what he was during his existence. DELESCLUZE was one of those men who, with the most trifling thought of self-interest, and with the sacrifice of everything to conviction, DELESCLUZE's existence proved a long martyrdom. A barrister by profession, he devoted himself to the press in 1830, and soon made himself conspicuous by his Radicalism. After BARBÈS' attempt to raise Paris he was condemned to three years' imprisonment for complicity with LAMENNAIS. He suffered the whole term of his imprisonment, and in 1838 resumed with more faith and ardor than ever the propagation of democratic ideas. Again he incurred condemnation and the suppression of his papers. But nothing discouraged him, and he took a polemic constituted much to the revolution of 1848. After the successful of June of the same year he was accused of complicity, and sentenced par contumace to six years' penal servitude. DELESCLUZE this time escaped to England, and remained there until 1854. At that period, in spite of the remonstrances of his friends, and in the hope of raising public indignation against the coup d'état, he crossed over to Boulogne. He was arrested almost on his landing, sent to Paris, and arraigned before a special tribunal to take his trial for participation in the troubles of June. Condemned to transportation for an indefinite term, power DELESCLUZE had to suffer a martyrdom which few men could have endured. He was at first taken to Belle-Isle, and subsequently transferred from there to the bagnes of Toulon and Brest, where he was chained up with the worst convicts, and treated half-starved and hard-worked. At last they threw him into the hold of a transport-ship and sent him to Cayenne. DELESCLUZE has himself related how he made the voyage four times without being removed from the ship, the French authorities cheerfully risking his death from the vitiated atmosphere of the hold and the scanty food and disgusting food allotted to him. DELESCLUZE had, however, enough moral energy to resist these frightful tests, and was at last landed at Cayenne. In this deadly climate he remained, treated as a convict, from 1856 to 1866, when he was allowed to return to France, and immediately founded the Réveil, a most radical paper. DELESCLUZE pointed out from the first the fatal militiary propensities into which France was pinning under the sway of BONAPARTE; he predicted the war with Germany, foresaw its consequences, and was, with ROCHEFORT, the only man who dared to express aloud his abhorrence of hostilities. During the first stage he denounced all the mistakes of the Government of National Defence, and the population of Paris testified its gratitude by sending him to the National Assembly of Bordeaux. He voted against the cession of Lorraine and Alsace, resigned his seat on being elected member of the Commune, and, office having elected identified himself with the insurrection, died on the barricades, unwilling to survive because he thought that his death would be more beneficial to his cause than his life. Whatever may be said about him, his name remains unstained; his memory will ever be cherished as that of a martyr of liberty and as one of those few admirable and choice spirits who devote their life and strength to the propagation of a great idea.

THE UNIVERSAL REPUBLICAN.

DOMBROWSKI is the type of the universal republican, who carries out his theory of fighting for the emancipation of the people in whatever part of the world he finds himself. GARIBALDI is the incarnation of it, and so was DOMBROWSKI. In consulting his previous life, it will be found well filled, although comparatively short. He fought for Polish independence and in the Italian war under GARIBALDI. DOMBROWSKI was in Paris during the first siege, and GARIBALDI, who regarded him as his ablest officer, asked earnestly for him. Instead of complying with these wishes, Gen. TROCHU put DOMBROWSKI in prison. He, too, has by his voluntary death confounded those who accused him of fighting for lucre.

FELIX PYAT.

As for FELIX PYAT, the "jail-bird," this epithet, in any case, is ill-founded, for he has never been in jail. Always condemned, he always contrived to escape detection. During his long exile in England he showed himself the bitterest enemy of the Empire. He must have been a studious thief, at all events, for the habitués of the British Museum reading-room may easily remember a man with handsome and strong features, who passed there the greater part of his twenty years' proscription in study. FELIX PYAT was born at Vierzon in 1812, and it is a curious fact that he has made of his native town, the most republican place in France after Paris. At the last municipal elections, which took place during the late resistance of the capital, Vierzon placed FELIX PYAT at the head of the poll. He was always opposed to the coercive measures taken by the Commune, and he even tendered his resignation when some papers were suppressed.

ET AL.

I cannot leave the subject without saying a few words on FLOURENS and DUVAL—men about their military capacity (they had none,) but on account of the great part which they took in the outburst of March 18. No one has forgotten how FLOURENS fought for two years in favor of the Candian insurrection, how he was elected by the Island of Crete a member of the Hellenic Assembly, arrested by the Greek authorities, and sent back to France. He went immediately afterward to Constantinople, where he published a radical paper in the Greek language. He eventually returned to France, but his denunciations of the Empire brought upon him so many condemnations that he found himself under the necessity of going to England, that everlasting shelter of proscripts. His after-life is already known. FLOURENS was a very learned man, and scarcely thirty-three years of age. He had succeeded to his father's chair at the Sorbonne, but his free opinions soon deprived him of his seat. FLOURENS was brave even to recklessness; he fought a duel with M. DE CASSAGNAC, the most dangerous swordsman in Paris, although he had never touched a foil in his life. He was much liked by all who knew him for his amiability and frankness. DUVAL was the type of the intelligent workman. He was gifted with depth of mind, wrote well, and spoke still better. He contributed more than any man to the revolution. As to RIGAULT, I repeat what I said about him in a previous letter. I always found him to be a good companion man, without the slightest tinge of cruelty in his character. Although very rich, he had devoted himself to politics since 1865. The only fault I could find with him was a want of dignity on certain occasions.

A MONARCH'S THOUGHTS.

What Frederick the Great Wrote Concerning Papal Infallibility and the French Nation.

A collection of passages from the works of FREDERICK the Great, apropos of current events, has just been published at Wirzburg. The following arguments bear a striking resemblance to those which are now generally advanced against the doctrine of Papal infallibility and the temporal power. "How can we believe in the infallibility of those who profess to be the vicegerents of Christ? We only pose banishing cattle could find a reasonable excuse for the deceit they have practised. Ecclesiastical councils abolished by the decrees of former councils under the presence of explaining them. The inference is clear; either one or the other must have erred. One may be a good Catholic and yet deprive the Vicegerent of God of his certainly possessions, which drew him every year considerable sums. Is it possible that the intelligent Pascal his soul's salvation in dangle? His remarks on the French nation are equally telling. "These people," he says, "are to-day what they admired yesterday. The secret of obtaining applause in France is to tell a novelty. To please the French it is necessary to get over difficulties by a single bound." Such are the French nation in the most fashionable in Europe. It has much wit, but no judgment or ideas. The leading characteristic of the German people is to see that amiable vivacity which

COUNT BISMARCK.

A Premier's Vacation—The Penalty of Greatness.

The request of the Imperial Chancellor to the public not to be molested, during his sojourn at Varzin, with unnecessary correspondence, seems to have produced very small effect. In a letter dated from Stolp, and addressed to the Cologne Gazette, we find the following complaints: "It is yesterday, only admitted the Imperial Chancellor. I am now tempted to compassionate him. Prince BISMARCK is at present, drinking the Karlsbad waters in Varzin, and what he, the much-tormented, before all things required is repose and cheerful rural tranquillity after his gigantic labors. It might be imagined that the public would accompanied this, but not suppose it could go to further demonstrations. It is most incredible how people do their utmost to destroy Prince BISMARCK's well-earned repose with volleys of missives, sometimes the promptings of pure wood nature, and sometimes the suggestions of importunate acquaintance. Though the request of the Imperial Chancellor to be left in peace has been printed, it is said, has been reproduced by nearly all the other German papers, the bulk of the daily communications received at Varzin has rather increased than diminished.) Among these may be found projects of every kind for the amelioration of the world, begging petitions, applications for loans, and even offers of marriage. Others send all property, requests to redeem, various articles in pawn, and manuscripts of new works respectfully declined by publishers. No stratagem is neglected to insure, as far as possible, the opening and reading of letters. Sometimes they arrive "recisement," at other times the envelope bears the words "private and confidential" or "important." Some applicants manage to obtain recommendations; others address their wishes to Legation Councilor BUCHER, and request him to disturb the rest of the Prince in an impossible condition for the recovery of the resident by the Prince almost to the verge of delirium. The pleas of communications generally terminate with the stereotype formula—I am well aware that you have little leisure time and the Prince still less, but I hope that an exception will be made in this case." The Imperial Chancellor has consequently been obliged to give instructions, in answer to the last and the ever-growing mail, that all private letters addressed to him be refused, unless when the address is recognized to be in the handwriting of one of the Prince's relatives or particular friends."

MODERN CÆSARISM.

The Future Rulers of France—M. Emile Ollivier on Gambetta's Plans and Chances.

Correspondence of the Pall Mall Gazette.

It would be strange if France were again to be ruled by an Italian—after CATHERINE DE MEDICI, MARY DE MEDICI, and CONCINI JULIUS MAZARIN, and then BONAPARTE, we now have GAMBETTA, whose family hails from Genoa. In the Figaro of July 31 there is a remarkable article on "Gambetta Cæsar Augustus, which insinuates that the spirit of revolution is nothing but Cæsarism, that Cæsarism is dictatorship, and that dictatorship may be collective or individual. "Our next CÆSAR after M. THIERS," says the writer, "will be GAMBETTA, who is formed to play the rôle, and is studying his part. His voice is strong and hollow-sounding voice (continues the article) which calls upon the crowd and makes a tyrant popular. He has already shown himself superior to all petty scruples of legality and justness, and that to attain the end he proposes to be not the man to weigh means in a severely moral scale. The only limit he will observe is that of his will. The Latin blood runs through his veins and the Latin ideas reign in his thoughts; he is descended in direct line from the Romans of the Empire, and has their domineering spirit and political instincts. In a word, he belongs to the line of the Cæsars, and has in him the stuff of a dictator. Is he a man of military genius? We cannot say, but he has enough of that quality, he has seen enough of warfare to know its principles, that he will found his power." The writer then explains that GAMBETTA went on with a hopeless war against the Prussians, with the view of creating a party for the future—a party devoted to the man who did not despair of saving his country. And so it was that GAMBETTA, who has certainly succeeded. "His partisans," adds Figaro, "are already found, and the party is formed. It includes first of all the chiefs appointed by GAMBETTA; the officers who broke their parole considering that it would be better to prolong a useless resistance than to observe a useless oath; those of the officers who, having obtained high grades, can only hope to keep them on the condition of GAMBETTA seizing power. The conspiracy is being hatched under our eyes slowly and prudently, as a good conspiracy which desires to succeed should be hatched. Conspiracies in the dark are not always successful. We have to see how GAMBETTA's game will be carried on in the broad daylight, like that of the 2d of December. The Cæsar promised to our democratic hopes knows how to be silent and to hold himself aloof. He has been reproached for being violent and febrile, but he can be as cold as ice when he will and circumspect as a turtle. He calculates, weighs and measures. He calculates how many days the authority of M. THIERS can exist; he weighs the value of the Assembly in case of a conflict; and he remains silent, so that people may see what he thinks. In the trail of reflection, on the practical policy of his party, which writer goes on to say that our next revolution will be an armed one, like the last but one, and that, rejecting natural Sovereigns, we shall soon hail a new Cæsar.

The New Steam-Ship City of Houston.

The steam-ship City of Houston, belonging to C. H. MALLORY & Co's line, will sail on her first trip to Key West and Galveston this afternoon at 3 o'clock under command of Capt. PARTRIDGE, one of the most popular men in the Texas trade. The City of Houston is the only iron steamer of the line, and was built at Chester, Penn., of the best material, and is in every respect a magnificent specimen of naval architecture. She is 220 feet long, 33 feet wide, and 20 feet deep. Her tonnage is 1,233, and she has a direct acting engine of 4 feet stroke and 4 feet stroke. The passenger traffic at this season of the year is not very large, but the shipping business is exceedingly good, and all the six vessels of the line have as much as they can conveniently do. Yesterday afternoon a few friends of the firm assembled in the magnificent cabin of the City of Houston, and after partaking of a fine collation drank toasts and wished success to the ship and her owners, and indeed all concerned in her welfare. Among those present were Mr. C. H. MALLORY, Capt. PARTRIDGE, Deputy Collector MORRIS, Mr. SAML. GODWIN, and several citizens of Galveston.

A Baltimorean's Fight with a Panther.

A correspondent at Blackford, West Va., sends to the Baltimore Sun the following account of an adventure which, he says, befell a young man named ALFRED LEVINGSTON, a resident of Baltimore, in that neighborhood, a few days ago:

"On the 30th of July a young man by the name of AARON LEVINGSTON, from Baltimore, accompanied by an old hunter named LOUGHRY, took their rifles and started out to hunt bears, which infest the neighborhood. When about three miles from home they heard terrible screams, which were the cries of a panther, when about to attack. In another moment the beast pounced upon young LEVINGSTON from his perch upon the upper limb of a tree, and both fell to the ground. LOUGHRY, when he saw them down, hit the panther with the butt end of his rifle on the head, which knocked him off. LEVINGSTON immediately rose, when the beast again sprang at him, and LOUGHRY coming to his assistance received a blow, which knocked him into the earth. He has remained unconscious ever since. The confinement of the wild beast, and immediately snatched up his gun and shot the panther through the heart. The panther made a spring at LEVINGSTON, and when in mid-air fell dead to the earth. LEVINGSTON received but few scratches and contusions. The panther measured nine feet, and four inches from the nose to the end of the tail, and was as large a specimen as has been seen in the county for many years."

The health of Gov. ANTHONY COLBY, of New-Hampshire, who was one of the most popular Executives the Granite State ever had, is reported to be rapidly failing. He is afflicted with softening of the brain and general debility.

Those fond of coincidences may be interested in the fact that a farmer in Newport, R. I., dug up on Monday last, Aug. 1, a lady's ring bearing on the inside the inscription: "R. J. to M. S., Aug. 7, 1774."

Col. JOHN M. CONNELL, who won't take the stump for the Ohio Democrats because he doesn't believe in the new departure and does believe in having a candidate for Governor fairly nominated, is a brother-in-law of Gen. THOMAS EWING, Jr.

A carriage containing a gentleman, two ladies and two children, was driven over an embankment in St. Paul, Minn., on the evening of the 5th inst., and rolled over and over down a steep declivity, fatally injuring the gentleman and seriously injuring the other occupants.

Every Saturday Mr. S. J. BRETZ, of Hartford, Conn., pays the postage on all letters held for non-payment in the Post-office of that city. They are then forwarded, with the request that the receiver will comfit the amount paid, a request usually heeded, and gratefully acknowledged.

E. A. POLLARD has written another book, and in it alludes to slavery as the last curse. The general and persevering tone of it, as the preface says, is that of consolation for "the lost cause," and congratulation for "the lost curse," the loss in the first respect being possibly a delusion, and in the last positively a gain, and as it certainly a relief.

Cheering reports of the progress of the campaign in California are given by the San Francisco Alta, that journal saying that advices from all parts of the State leave but little doubt that the Republicans will achieve a great victory on the 8th of September, provided there is no abatement either in the efforts which are now being made or in the general enthusiasm which has been evoked.

A Canadian sailor is experiencing the woe of having an impulsive woman as a wife, and the woe of being impulsive. He came home from sea the other day, bursting but $15. She thought he should have brought more; and from mild remonstrances and gentle upbraidings they rapidly grew angry, finally coming to blows, and then and there separating "forever." It turned out that the man had placed $60 in the savings bank, but felt called upon to defend himself first against the angry words of his wife and her baseless charges before explaining what he had done with the money.

A Richmond correspondent tells a story at the expense of HENRY A. WISE, which, if true, may have a moral to thoughtful minds. WISE, as the story runs, was employed by a man to defend him in a suit brought by a negro tenant whom he had ejected. The plaintiff easily obtained judgment for damages, and when WISE demanded $50 as his fee, the client sent him a check for the amount, "payable to HENRY A. WISE for services not rendered." This natural ly excited the ire of the Ex-Governor and Ex-General, and rejecting the offer of his son on the ground that the latter was too fiery and impulsive to manage the matter, he interviewed the client himself, and after a somewhat heated discussion, struck him in the face and then hooked him vigorously!

California papers received yesterday deny their previous report that Mrs. CADY STANTON and Miss SUSAN B. ANTHONY visited Mrs. SAWIER after she murdered Mrs. JULIA S. LAKE. They say that Mrs. SAWIER is still in jail, comparatively calm, and add: "Her entire demeanor has indicated an intense affection for her husband, whom she seems inclined to acquit of responsibility for the terrible tragedy. He, on the contrary, has treated her with great indifference, telling her he would never live with her again. He admitted in the jail that he had written a letter cautioning her not to come to Stockton, and saying that Mrs. LAKE would kill her if she came. This letter appears to have maddened her, and brought her over at once. The feeling among those who have charge of the prisoner, and those who have seen her, appears to be very favorable toward her, but she is generally censured for not shooting her husband instead of Mrs. LAKE. SAWIER is regarded as a cold and heartless brute."

Some of the Democratic papers in Kentucky are not so well pleased with the results of their State election as their Northern political allies affect to be. For example, the Lexington Press says: "The result bears with it a lesson which it would be well for the Democracy of Kentucky to heed. Years of unquestionable supremacy has had its demoralising effect upon our party." And again: "Our party has tasted the bitter fruits of following the counsels of those unfit to lead, who base their claim for leadership upon a fancied popularity with our opponents, rather than upon the undivided and enthusiastic support of their own party." Of another matter, the Lexington Observer, also Democratic, says: "If any particular effort had been made by the Democratic Party, as an organization, to secure the negro vote, we might justly reproach the negro for declining to vote with that party at the polls. But so far from this being the case, all effort—if we may call that effort which was merely a dignified indifference to results—was made in the opposite direction; and, while we were not so disdainfully self-confident as to reject negro votes altogether, we seemed to be constantly troubled with any apprehension that we exhibited too much interest in this 'anti-Republican' citizen, we might say the aristocratic citizen, of African descent. Probably unconsciously to the most of the Democratic leaders, the negro has been taught to believe that the conflict between the two parties is a political one between the rich and the poor, and that the Democratic party is the party of the rich, and the Republican party is the party of the poor. All these prejudices must be overcome and with the Democratic party."

A great many of the men who are now candidates on the California Democratic State ticket, or are actively advocating its election, were members of the State Convention in California on the 19th of June, 1861, which formally declared by resolution that every "effort" opposed to the employment of force by the Federal Government against the seceded States for the purpose of compelling obedience and submission to Federal authority" and that they favored the assumption of the Union upon constitutional guarantees which will be acceptable to both parties of the Confederacy," and "if that determination were impossible," then the recognition of the independence of the Confederate States, and a treaty of amity and peace between them and the United States Government, as the only alternative which would terminate the horrors of civil war, and bring back peace and happiness to our distracted country.

Mrs. BERNARD HENRY, of Philadelphia, a daughter of the late JOHN JACOB VANDERKEMP, for many years General Agent of the Holland Land Company of Philadelphia, has presented to the Buffalo Historical Society, through Ex-Gov. SEYMOUR, a large number of valuable letters from Thomas Jefferson, George Clinton, De Witt Clinton, Aaron Burr, John Jay and other men of prominence, addressed to Judge ADRIAN VANDERKEMP, her grandfather; also his autobiography and a journal of his travels from Kingston, Ulster County, to the shores of the Oneida Lake in 1795. Ex-Gov. SEYMOUR says: "The relationship of the grandmother of Mrs. HENRY to Western New-York were not as direct as those of her father; but they are of great interest. As a citizen of Holland at the time of our Revolutionary War, holding friendly connections with the Dutch statesman VANDER CAPELLEN, he was able to aid Mr. ADAMS and the other American Commissioners in negotiating the loan in Holland which saved our country from financial ruin. This loan was the basis of the purchase of the lands of Western New-York by the Holland Company. By a series of unforeseen and unexpected events his son in the course of time became the general agent of this great Company, which held an area of country larger than some of the States of this Union. His services to this country were thus rewarded in an unlooked-for way. Judge VANDERKEMP was forced to leave Holland on account of political troubles, which are set forth in his autobiography. This throws a clear light upon a portion of Dutch history which is not generally understood. He came to this country with letters of introduction to Gen. WASHINGTON from FRANKLIN, JOHN ADAMS and others. After visiting Mount Vernon and examining the then wilderness of Central New-York, in the end he made his home in Oneida County, in the village of Trenton, where his friend, Col. MATTA, resided. In this retired village he gave his attention to literary and agricultural pursuits. He numbered among his correspondents Mr. Jefferson, John Adams, John Quincy Adams, John Jay, George Clinton, De Witt Clinton and others of like standing. You will find among the papers sent to you a sketch, by Gov. CLINTON, of the character and learning of Judge VANDERKEMP, in which he speaks of him in glowing terms. Gov. CLINTON was always his warm friend. Both of the Mr. ADAMS showed a strong interest in him and his family, and I once had the pleasure of visiting Trenton with JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, when he went to that place for the purpose of paying his respects to the daughter of the Judge after his death."

THE LUCKY PRINTER.

History of the now Famous Geraldine Corson—How He Acquired a Colossal Fortune and How He is Spending It.

The early history of Mr. CORNELIUS CORSON is involved in more or less of obscurity. As a tender age he was apprenticed to the printer's trade, and in due time was allowed to act as a journeyman type-setter. In the Evening Express office in some way he became a favorite, and was finally made foreman. He held a rather nondescript position, and made himself generally useful in doing odds and ends that required neither skill nor mate. From this work he was occasionally sent on errands to procure information.

This finally developed into the work of an important reporting. His salary during that period varied from $6 to $8 per week. Several times he was sent over to the meetings of the Common Council on various errands. It was at this time that his political ambition commenced. By bob-nobing with the members he gained their good will, and was at last appointed reporter to the Council. Finding the result of obsequious wheedling and constant flattery to yield him success, he pushed the plan with redoubled vigor. He was the first one to secure an annual appropriation of $100—and subsequently of $200—to the Common Council reporter. His next advance was to the position of publication clerk; then as clerk of various committees. His "pickings" in this way continued to accumulate, until he made quite a comfortable living, dolled his body and treadmere garments, and donned a plan but comfortable costume. Soon afterward he married a most estimable lady, and thus became a brother-in-law to the present Superintendent of Police. At about this time he became intimate with "Boss" TWEED, who was then a poor and rough no body. The twain seem to have then become joined together for all time. Subsequently he became one of Superintendent BLUNT's confidees, and during the war was profitably engaged in enlisting recruits. Thus he made about $20,000, part of which was invested in the Transcript, a then unprofitable paper, but since enormously valuable from corporation advertising. "The New-York Printing Company," a monstrous concern, which prints all the most profitable of the City documents, is owned principally by himself and Mr. TWEED, and is in itself a mine of wealth. Successively he has been appointed Chief of the Bureau of Elections, School Trustee, &c., all offices of extravagant emolument. He is "Boss" TWEED's private Secretary, and legislative manipulator, a position of immense influence and money value. With his money thus acquired he purchased a princely estate in the town of Eastchester, in Westchester County, fifteen miles from this City. His property is situated just outside the village limits of Mount Vernon, on the line of the New-York and New-Haven Railroad, and is worth not less than $150,000. He is about commencing the erection of a stone palace, 100 feet square, three stories high, with Mansard roof, to cost $200,000. His present mansion is an enlarged old mansion, very spacious, and the interior is fitted up with most extravagant splendor. The carpets, furniture and decorations are as elegant, and in some respects not dissimilar to the prevalent style in our new County Court-House. He has also an immense stable, carriage-house, &c., about 200 feet in length, and three stories in height, with a fine Mansard roof and observatory tower surmounting the whole. The first floor is devoted to stable purposes; the second to billiards, ten-pins, other games and ladies' parlor, smoking parlor, &c.; the third, floor to spare guest chambers. Pianos and other musical instruments, paintings, statuary, vertu, &c., are in profusion. He has an independent system of gas and water works, gardens, conservatories, &c. He gives princely entertainments, and expends money with a liberal eye to popularity and political profit in the future. He is "sole lessee and proprietor," to all appearances, of a lawyer, a doctor, a minister, and an editor, to say nothing of a shoal of smaller creatures of a cheaper market valuation. He is President of the village gas company. He is the grand factotum of the Episcopal Church, (sometimes facetiously called "Tammany Chapel,") and, although not a member thereof, he is a vestryman, and supplies the bulk of the funds for the support of the establishment, including pastor, choir, Sunday-school, grave-digger, sexton, &c. &c. (Query: Does he reside in that locality, he claims residence and votes in this City?) This is about the value of his services to the village church, and interests of the residents of that locality. All these services he has paid out of his own hard earnings, and all the money he has ever received from the public for any of his offices. He drafted the Metropolitan Police bill, and with that, and in order to drown the clamor of the people, he started a weekly paper called the Westchester County Democrat to advocate annexation and boulevard projects. In order to support his imported editor, he gave away some of the offices under "Boss" TWEED, in one of the City departments. Several of his local satellites are nursed in the same way. He has established the "East Chester Stockholders," of which TWEED is the largest stockholder, and CORSON the President. (Last year he had a fight for the Presidency, and was beaten for it by a large majority, of which himself and TWEED are directors.)

While the bill was pending TWEED took a whim to have his name and the document as President. After it was passed, however, TWEED as once resigned and CORSON succeeded to the honors. His latest penchant is to become "Col. CORSON," and all sorts of efforts à la FISK, Jr., are being made to get rid of the present Colonel RAY, of the Third Regiment of Westchester County, and allow the uneasy CORNELIUS "to wear honors at the country's mouth." It is also very likely that he wishes to be elected State Senator in the place of Mr. CAULDWELL.

In all things he seems diligent in securing the county, as the most promising political field for his future. His horses and carriages and retinue of servants are sent every where, whether it be a funeral, a christening, a ward meeting, a ball, a party, a fair, or public gathering of any sort whatever. His liberality (?) astonishes the common people, whose acquaintance he seems to avoid, termed "the ignorant cloud-hoppers". And, when he attends one of the fraternity of his earlier, and needier, and poorer days, who forgot his present status and call him the old, familiar name, "CORNELIUS."

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Specimen Brick.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The legislation of the last session of the State Legislature will admitted to be the most corrupt and outrageous ever known in any State of the Union. But of all their bad acts, that entitled "An act to make provision for the local government of the City and County of New-York," which, I am informed, was drafted by PETER B. SWEENY, OAKEY HALL and RICHARD O'GORMAN, members of the Ring, is the most obnoxious to every honest citizen and lawyer.

Here is the beginning of the third section of that act, passed April 15, 1871: "Within twenty days after the 1st day of May, 1871, the following persons, viz.: the Mayor of the City of New-York, (HALL,) the Controller of the City of New-York, (CONNOLLY,) the Commissioner of Public Works, (TWEED,) and the President of the Department of Public Parks, (SWEENY,) shall meet as a Board of Apportionment, and after fixing the amount (of taxes) to be raised, as in the first section of this act provided—and so forth, concluding as follows: For all the purposes of this act the officers named therein shall be considered County as well as City officers.

Now, here is a specimen of the most audacious, impudent and tyrannical legislation, and powers conferred thereby upon HALL, CONNOLLY, TWEED and SWEENY, the unprincipled oligarchy which rules so despotically over the City of New-York, never equaled in any age or nation; powers unlimited to tax and rax the tax wrested from the citizens as in their sovereign will may seem proper. But look further, at the sixth section, and see the brickedness and hypocrisy of these four dictators.

6. It shall not be lawful for the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, or the Board of Supervisors of the County of New-York, or the Board of Apportionment hereby created to appropriate or supply any portion of the tax herein authorized to be raised (twenty-five millions) in aid of any private or sectarian school, or to any institution or enterprise that is under the control of any religious denomination, &c.; but this Board of Apportionment shall have the authority legal to provision, for each founding in the charge of by the Sisters of Charity, and as much as they please to the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum in Prince-street, the Sisters of St. Dominic Asylum, the St. Vincent's Hospital, St. Francis Hospital, St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, the St. Joseph's Home, Society for Protecting Destitute Roman Catholic Children from Proselytism, and institutions of all creeds."

A more unprincipled and wicked act was never passed by any Legislature, and the people are robbed of their property to fill the treasuries of Roman Catholic institutions and other sectarian bodies, who are able and ought to take care of their own poor.

DEMOCRATIC LAWYER.

"The Conviction of an Innocent Man."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I beg respectfully to demur to a paragraph in to-day's TIMES, with the above heading. The man in question was found guilty by a jury of twelve citizens, whose only motive was to do their duty, and it by no means follows that he was innocent because the excellent Judge thought otherwise. Statements like the one now adjoined to have a tendency to weaken the cause of "trial by jury," and add to the perplexity which every honest man feels when called to perform jury duty. In within the precincts of the Halls of Justice the Bench is occupied by able and upright, may be mistaken as well as the Box.

A JURYMAN.

NEW-YORK, Friday, July 11, 1871.

[This is a very proper letter. The head line to the report in question was a thoughtless one, and "A Juryman's" remonstrance is perfectly just.]

The New Ring.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your exposures of the rascality and thieving of the New-York Tammany officials are read with lively interest by the people of this borough. Upon the arrival of the New-York mail the TIMES is in great demand, and I would not be surprised if one news-dealer had doubled the number he formerly got. My object in writing is to ask if it is not highly probable that the City of New-York has not already paid for the furniture, &c., that will make DICK TWEED's hotel "the best appointed house in the United States!" Those chairs must surely have been for the new Metropolitan, and from your exhibit of the Tammany Hall Theatre's expenses, it is very apparent they will all be kept warm when Hon. RICHARD becomes "mine host." Continue in your good work, and you will have the thanks of your country readers.

MAUCH CHUNK, Penn., Aug. 10, 1871.

Nearly an Accident.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

This evening I came from Newark to New-York on the 6½ train. On nearing the Hoboken depot the train suddenly halted, when a freight train passed us. The passengers then found out that they had had another hair's breadth escape from one of those horrible catastrophies commonly called "accidents." A switch is situated just at that point, but the man who had to attend it was gone, and no one knew where to find him. If the engineer of the train had not seen the near danger in time to halt and give the approaching freight train time to get out of the common track the result would not have been very pleasant to those witnessing it. Happily we were spared a new trial of the old experiment, to wit: two trains to pass each other on one track.

Of course, nobody to blame as long as Courts of Justice and Legislatures are owned by railroad monopolies.

The Senate Iceberg on the Pay-Roll.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Staats Zeitung of to-day has the following significant commentary on that portion of the City pay-roll published in your paper of the 10th inst.:

"The TIMES again hurls a bombshell at our City Government in the shape of an exhibit of richly salaried sinecures. It is probably correct, yet it strikes us as remarkable that it omits those departments which harbor, according to common report, many Republicans, in accordance with the terms of the trade that was effected at Albany, and under the the existence of the new City Charter. Mr. CONNOLLY cannot evade shedding light on the subject, and the sooner he does so the better for him. A full list of salaried employes is part and parcel of the expenditures of the last past few years, and though long accustomed, it has as yet not made its appearance in public. It may be possible that the announcement of such a list might yield a considerable income to the City Treasury, for it is very probable that there are persons in our midst who would sooner return what they have thus received than see their names too prominently before the public."

Since the Staats Zeitung seems to know the terms and conditions of the trade made at Albany between TWEED & Co. and a sufficient number of Republicans, would it not be doing a public service to not hint at such knowledge, but lay the particulars before the people? Such information would be specially instructive, if with the course and motives of certain influential Republican papers that seconded the surrender of the City to TWEED's charter could be explained. The Staats Zeitung might so still further and furnish in advance the names and places of those "Republicans" (!) that were put into sinecures in consideration of the passage of the Tweed Charter.

May be a few of those who at present represent Republicans in the Republican General Committee, Hon. H. GREELEY presiding, would then know why they are on the pay-roll of Tammany Hall.

I. C. F. B.

NEW-YORK, Friday, Aug. 11, 1871.

[Why does not the Staats Zeitung publish the facts to which it only alludes? We will copy them into the most prominent part of our pages.]

Women's Rights.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There is no question of the benefit which we have derived from your exposure of Tammany's last villainies, and, I for one am heartily glad that your worthy journal, which has always had many supporters, has gained many more by the course which it has pursued in this matter. So far you have done almost all toward bringing these frauds and discrepancies to light; but yet there is a point beyond which you cannot go unaided, and that is, in bringing these rascals to an actual trial, and compelling them either to prove themselves innocent or to be proved to be guilty. We see a warm fight several projects with this object in view are on foot, and the writer's object is to impress the public, through your Journal, with the necessity of carrying on these projects, so that they may ultimately give us the good results for which they are destined. It is no exception to be over sanguine, if possible, for we have no doubt but that the same process of plundering which has been going on for the past few years, and which has made the world has ever known, has been conducted by TWEED and his HALL and company, the originators and perpetrators in the affair, are breaking in Justice.

VIRGINIA.

A Shocking Situation. Contributed to Religious Periodicals. Wonders and Gifts as Specimens. Sermons and Lectures Delivered. Other Items Connected with the Commerce of Richmond.

From Our Own Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., Monday, Aug. 7, 1871.

Quite an excitement has been created in the Second Baptist Church of this city, when its pastor, Rev. J. A. CHAMBLISS, announced publicly to his congregation that, after much consideration, he had been led to renounce his position as one of the principal tenets of his denomination—that of close communion. He avowed that he could no longer advocate the doctrine of close communion, and yet, if permitted to do so, he would gladly hold his membership and his convictions without departing from the practice required of him by the rules of his Church. This declaration astounded the members of the Church, as they looked upon the unexpected announcement as an unexampled proceeding. Yet they highly esteemed him, and it was informally agreed that, without taking more pertinent measures against him, he should be allowed to resign his pastorate. Yesterday, at a full meeting of the Church, his resignation was considered, and accepted, by a unanimous vote. The resolutions passed extend the deep regret of the Church at their action thereon, vindicate its religious principles at the expense of a beloved and much-respected brother, and as a token of regard for the retiring pastor, it is ordered that $150 per month be paid him until the 1st of January, 1872. This is a rare instance of generosity, considering all the circumstances of the case.

Colored women and girls have become a favorite class of servants with the house-keepers of New-York and Boston; it we can believe our house-servants here. They say that the demand for colored females from both the cities named is very great, and still increasing. They cannot fill half the orders for such servants, and one agent now advertises for 500 women and girls to go North, promising from $12 to $16 per month. These colored servants get here from $6 to $8 per month—rarely more than $10. Of course, the inducements of such comparatively vast wages, compared with the attractions of travel and of life in a large city, is drawing large numbers of these people away; so, and there is a growing complaint here that it is difficult to get cooks, washer-women, or nurses.

A new evening paper, to be called the Evening Star, is projected here by a combination of wealthy capitalists and five newspaper men. In politics it will be conservative, yet independent. There are already two evening journals here, and these would seem enough for a city no larger than Richmond, but the projectors of the new enterprise believe that "there is plenty of room in the top." If the plans do not fall through, the new paper will appear early in September.

The Pilot laws of Virginia are causing much discontent in commercial circles. These laws provide that every vessel coming to Richmond, for instance, shall not only take a pilot aboard to bring it into the Capes, but shall employ him up the river to the city and down the river again out of the Capes. The vessel is chilled to stop, plays a fog to touch it off and carry it down the river, and the Captain of the ship usually is more familiar with the channel of the river than any Cape pilot can be. The chances of pilotage up the river are nigh, while the pilotage itself is wholly unnecessary, the law being self-sufficient. Yet the pilots insist upon their rights and privileges under the law, to the great inconvenience and detriment of our commerce. Captains of vessels that do not take a pilot to the Capes are arrested, a recent instance being the arrest and imprisonment at Hampton of Capt. MCGILL, of the bark P. O. Warwick, and the Captains of vessels that do not take a pilot on having a pilot are also arrested as they proceed. In a case which came before our Police Justice a few days since, he discharged the Captain of a tug-boat that had brought up a vessel which refused to take a pilot, because the vessel was already inside the Capes before being hailed by the pilot offering his services. Our Chamber of Commerce has taken up the matter, and will have the law tested in the Courts, and, if necessary, will use all proper exertions to have it repealed or modified by the Legislature this coming Winter.

July was, for the most part, a very cool month here and throughout Virginia, but August is hot enough to pay for it. It is feared, too, that we will have a drouth similar to that of last year. The first Saturday in August is known as a rainy day, as it is said to have had no rain only three times within the past fifty years. But there was no rain here this first Saturday of August, although even the Signal Bureau man at Washington prophesied it as among the "probabilities." F.

CONTRABAND CIGARS.

Seizure of an Extensive Manufacturing Establishment in Brooklyn—Operations of the Revenue Officers.

For some time past the honest tobacco importers of this City have been considerably annoyed by the operations of a gang of smugglers who have been engaged in bringing large quantities of cigars into port and disposing entirely putting them on the market at reduced rates. Col. FRANK E. HOWE, special agent of the Treasury Department, has been untiring in his labors in arresting and the extensive frauds; and has succeeded therefore, has not been sanguine expectations. The result of his labors will probably be to suppress any further trading in contraband cigars for a long time to come. During his investigations he discovered that a counterfeiting establishment existed among several Hicklebeggarly-looking Dutchmen and Germans, who, it appears from Havana free of duty and that a number of sailors and others belonging to certain Havana steam-ships, aided in the smuggling. He found that more than 100,000 cigars of various brands have been surreptitiously brought here, without the payment of duty, and measures were taken to capture and punish the principal offenders. Among the prisoners already arrested were FRANCIS DORAN and JULIUS HAHN, partners in the tobacco trade at No. 41 New-street, and FRANK NICHOLAS, a sailor. DORAN and NICHOLAS are now confined in the Ludlow-street Jail awaiting their examination before Commissioner DAVENPORT next week. An attempt was made by the Government officials to have an examination in the case yesterday, but the counsel for the prisoners asked for an adjournment, which was finally granted. Warrants have been issued against several others, the accused parties who have not yet been apprehended.

Japanese Visitors to the Mayor.

About 9 o'clock yesterday morning twelve Japanese gentlemen, who have been sent out by the Provincial Government of Japan to study American and European manners, customs and systems of local and general government, paid a visit to the City Hall, and, in the absence of the Mayor, were received by Col. JOLLIN. They brought with them a letter of introduction from Mr. J. M. FERRIS, a college friend of the Mayor's, who is connected with the Board of Foreign Missions, and were accompanied by TAMADA, a Japanese student of Princeton College, and Mr. W. JONES, also a student of the same College. After being shown round the Governor's room and the chambers of the Common Council, they expressed their disappointment at not being able to see the Mayor, and presented their interpreter had assured them the Times and other leading papers were full of his doings, and they felt sure he must be a most wonderful personage. They also asked after Messrs. TWEED, SWEENY and CONNOLLY, and expressed an intention of calling on them soon in order to learn something about our prisons, the local Government, and especially the management of its finances. Col. JOLLIN gave them letters of introduction to Major-Gen. MCDOWELL and the commandant at Fort Hamilton, and on leaving the City Hall they took carriage for the fort.

Police Trials and Transfers.

Twenty-six policemen were arraigned, yesterday, before Commissioners MANNERAN and HAHN, on charges of improper conduct and breaches of discipline. A principal case was that of Doorman RICHARD BURKE, Eighth Precinct, who was accused of taking it from Lazarus SMITH, who was locked up in the Prince-street Station-house for taking care of a wrapper. His defence was that the girl insisted on his taking the money, and that after getting it he spent the greater part of it in beer for her. The case was referred to the Board. Patrolman MONAHAN, of the Twentieth Precinct, was charged with being drunk in the dock-house, at the foot of West Thirty-fourth-street, on the night of the 4th inst., when he should have been on post. He intended being tried, but ended by pleading guilty. He was fined $10. Patrolman DWYER, of the same Precinct, was charged with being drunk. The fact of his intoxication was proved by several witnesses, and he was fined $10. Patrolman SMITH yesterday transferred Sergt. GEORGE C. HANCOCK from the Second Precinct to the Sixteenth Precinct, and Sergt. JACOB A. WESTERVELT from the Sixteenth to the Second. Several patrolmen were also transferred.

THE LATE LIEUT. MCKEE.

His Last Letter to His Friends in Kentucky.

The following interesting letter from the late Lieut. HUGH MCKEE was written only a few days before the attack on the Corean forts, in which he lost his life, and it contains the last lines the members of his family in Lexington, Ky., received from him. We quote the letter as it appears in the Lexington Gazette of Wednesday last:

FLAG-SHIP COLORADO, }
RIVER SALEM, COREA, June 1, 1871. }

The Admiral has just decided to send the Palos to Chefoo for coal and provisions, and as she leaves at daylight in the morning, I will only have time to write a short letter this evening. I have now written during the three weeks that have elapsed since we left Japan. As we had no idea there would be an opportunity for communicating with civilization until we reached Chefoo in this ship, and besides, we have been very much occupied in surveying and preparing for offensive operations in case we are attacked. We were fortunate in finding this place. Steaming 30 miles, a distance of 600 miles, being detained by foggy weather and the want of charts to navigate by, so that we approached the coast with extreme caution. The fleet sailed in reverse order of double echelon, the smallest ship at the salient angle, and each vessel took soundings and angles, communicating the result by signal. We found the coast very similar to that of Japan, but the net-work of inlands shoal cover it are not cultivated or even inhabited. The country is of volcanic formation, and the scenery of the bays and harbors perfectly picturesque. This river, the Salie or Salt River, is a debouche of the Leine, which leads to the capital, Seoul, 30 miles distant.

It was here that the French fought the Coreans in 1866. Yesterday three officials from their Foreign office visited the ship, and were very peaceful in their overtures, assuring us that we would not be molested in surveying or in ascending the river if we did not advance upon Seoul. We sent a dispatch to their Prime Minister with these assurances, we sent the Monocacy, Palos, and four steam launches to survey a few miles above where we are anchored. I was on duty on board, and unfortunately did not go. Our boats had hardly left the ship when, rounding a bend in the river, they were opened upon, from about forty heavy guns and 1,000 "zingals" and other "murdering pieces." The range was so short the boats were struck a number of times, and the water around them lashed into a foam. We opened upon them with shell, shrapnel and canister, and in less than half an hour all of their batteries were silenced, and the Coreans flying in all directions. They numbered about 2,000, and many men, for as they left their works we shelled them for two miles. There were 2,000 or 3,000 men in the forts, and every man tried to be ahead. The forts presented a beautiful appearance as our boats approached, resembling an immense fair. The bend in the river was formed by a high promontory, which bristled with cannon and flags in the greatest profusion. At the top was a pavilion with an immense yellow flag surmounting it, in the centre of which were characters which our interpreter read as "Grand Commander-in-Chief." A pistol was fired from this pavilion as a signal for all other batteries to open. Such thing is worse than to be shelled, and dazed of all descriptions, planted at intervals of ten or fifteen paces, and as Coreans all dress in white and yellow, we could distinctly see them moving among their guns. Our vessels anchored above, and we shelled them front and rear. The Monocacy knocked a hole in her bottom on a rock, and so returned to her former anchorage, as well as the other vessels. The launches opened upon us, only two men wounded; one lost his fingers and the other was shot through the shoulder.

MEADE, of Kentucky, commanded one of the launches from this ship and TOTTEN the other; in the first force, MEADE commanded a cutter of twelve pieces, and FORCE, also of Kentucky, a gig of six pieces, and I in the other battery. I have a company of cavalrymen armed with the Remington breech-loading carbines.

Though I fear you will find this rough sketch like the showmen's "Daniel in the Lion's den," and have some difficulty in distinguishing Daniel from the lions, it may give you some idea of the engagement; and, as we had time for our next meal, I will write a more connected affair. Our ship and launches received no shot worth noting, but they did not fire more than once after our batteries opened.

I hope we may have an opportunity of sending letters every month, as the Admiral and Gov. LOW will have dispatches to send by every mail, and we expect to be in the habit of also having opportunity of sending them in the official mail-bag.

[A sketch of the river, promontory, and forts accompanied the letter.]

Remains of Chicago's New Census.

The population of Chicago was returned by the Federal enumerators in June, 1870, to be 298,991. In May last the publisher of the City Directory, at the request of business men, took, through his agents, a census of the city while obtaining names for the Directory, and now gives 334,270 as the total resident population of the city on the 30th of June last. The excess of males in 1871 is 6,285. In twelve wards the males exceed the females, and in several others the two are nearly equal. In eight wards the number of females exceed that of the males.

The population by divisions is thus stated:

SOUTH DIVISION.

Ward.	Males.	Females.	Total.
1	4,301	3,208	8,009
2	7,347	6,102	13,449
3	8,945	8,589	17,534
4	6,567	7,469	14,036
5	7,239	7,765	14,904
6	11,977	10,941	22,918
Total	46,906	44,851	91,457

WEST DIVISION.

Ward.	Males.	Females.	Total.
7	8,206	7,384	15,590
8	12,852	12,668	25,520
9	10,589	10,179	20,768
10	8,913	8,370	17,283
11	8,704	7,808	16,512
12	7,721	7,097	14,818
13	7,432	6,776	14,208
14	6,814	6,629	13,443
15	14,291	12,315	26,706
Total	84,671	81,224	165,895

NORTH DIVISION.

Ward.	Males.	Females.	Total.
16	8,149	8,231	16,380
17	6,619	6,585	12,514
18	8,422	8,382	16,804
19	4,449	4,788	9,237
20	7,798	8,723	14,522
Total	39,228	38,519	77,747

The Chicago Tribune, from which we take these figures, says: "Either of these divisions would constitute a city of the first-class—the North Division being larger than Milwaukee; the South Division being within a few hundreds as large as Cleveland, while the West Division would take rank next after New-Orleans, or as the fourth city in point of population in the country. The rapid increase of that part of the city is shown in the fact that it lacks but 2,000 of one-half the whole population."

Another Attempt to Get Mike Coburn Out of Jail.

Still another effort was made yesterday by the COBURNS to secure the release of MICHAEL COBURN, who is confined in the Tombs on a charge of murderously assaulting CHARLES BRUNNER. This time it was JOHN COBURN, who appeared at the Coroner's office in company with a man who claimed to be a relative of Mr. BRUNNER. Coroner HERRMAN was absent in consequence of sickness in his family, and the application to release MICHAEL on bail was therefore made to Coroner YOUNG, to whom JOHN COBURN stated that the relatives of BRUNNER was willing that bail should be taken. Coroner YOUNG declared that the matter was entirely in the hands of Coroner HERRMAN, and he should not interfere, whereupon COBURN withdrew. At a late hour of the day he returned with a lawyer, and announced his intention to secure the release of his peaceful brother by habeas corpus, but there was no Coroner present.

Criminals Sentenced at the Court of General Sessions.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Recorder HACKETT, JAMES WHELAN, convicted of burglary, was sentenced to ten years, with hard labor, in the State Prison; WILLIAM FARRELL, for grand larceny, State Prison, three years and six months; DAVID ELDRIDGE, for grand larceny, one year in the State Prison; GEORGE LOTTS, for grand larceny, in the State Prison for five years and six months; WM. CHRISTOPHER, for grand larceny, two years and six months in the State Prison; JOHN RUSSELL, for petty larceny, six months in the Penitentiary; DAVID TOMLEY, for petty larceny, six months in the Penitentiary; GEORGE TURMAN, (colored,) for grand larceny, five years in the State Prison, with hard labor; JAMES DREW, aged fourteen, sent to the Catholic Reformatory for grand larceny; JAMES STANTON, for receiving stolen goods, two years and six months in the Penitentiary; FLORENCE DOUGHERTY, for larceny from the person, two years and six months in the State Prison. In the case of WM. H. SMITH, who pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, the Recorder suspended sentence. JOHN HEYMAN pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery; sentence remanded.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—AUG. 11.

By Judge Sutherland.

Lachmeyer vs. Lachmeyer; motion granted.

By Chief Justice Barbour.

Charles Schmidt vs. Matilda Schmidt; report of referee confirmed, and decree of divorce entered in favor of plaintiff.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—AUG. 11.

Before Chief-Justice Barbour.

CLANDING.

Samuel Hammerstein vs. Isador Marks.—This is an action for damages, and comes up on a motion to vacate an order of arrest on which defendant was held to bail in the sum of $500. The ground of action was alleged slanderous charges uttered by defendant, among which were that plaintiff was a thief and a robber, had swindled several parties, and that his wife went to picnics with other men, and bore a character not quite up to Cæsar's wife. The motion to vacate was made on the ground that the alleged slanderous words were uttered in the Stage of Nova Scotia, and that they were not set forth with sufficient definiteness. Chief-Justice BARBOUR denied the motion.

FRIDAY, Aug. 11—P. M.

The quotations in London show the sudden advance in Bonds well sustained, especially in the case of the Ten-forties, which are a Five ₱ cent. bond like the New Loan, though with less than half the time to run. In our own market, prices are also fully supported, and became stronger late in the day. For the Sixes of 1881 the bid is now 117¾; the 1867s close at 113⅜, bid; the 1868s at 113⅜@114; and the Currency Sixes are 115. The temporary flurry in London, perhaps from imperfect understanding of the arrangement of subscriptions to the new Bonds, has ceased, and prices here are as steady as need be desired. As the facts become better known, and the Secretary's plans and the arrangements of Messrs. JAY COOKE & Co. better understood, we hope to see our own people exhibit their belief that their debt can be funded at lower rates of interest; and it would be gratifying to our national feelings if expressions of disparagement and mistrust should in future be confined to such of our foreign critics as are but too well acquainted with our resources, honor and administrative ability.

The pressure for cash Gold was more marked today. An eighth ₱ cent. for the day's use was paid throughout most of the day; and, after the close of banking hours, engagements for to-morrow have been made at a tax of three thirty-seconds ₱ cent. for use. Under this state of things, loans were shifted to an unusual extent; the clearances running up to nearly ninety millions. The balances showed that nearly five millions of coin had been taken out of the market. The price rose, under the covering of contracts, to 112⅜.

Foreign Exchange was very dull in consequence of this derangement in the Gold market, the rates being still 109½ for prime sixty-day sterling, and 110 for short sight. A concession from these rates could also be obtained.

In the General Stock market a spiritless business was carried on for the earlier half of the day, at prices that fell off slightly from those of yesterday afternoon. North-western fell to 69¼, Western Union to 90⅜, and Union Pacific broke down to 31¾ at 1 o'clock. The others were barely steady during this time. In the afternoon a better feeling was noted in some descriptions, with a marked recovery in Union Pacific, which carried it up to 33¾, and on Pacific Mail, which reached 48¾, popular opinion being pleased to establish a close affinity between the two, on the score of supposed friendly arrangements for the handling of our trade with China and Japan. The New-York Central Stock and Scrip were steady, Reading sluggishly strong at 114¾@115, and North-western recovered to 70, the point at which it opened. Ohios kept close to 46, and Wabash to 53¾, while St. Paul improved to 61¾. Erie was fairly active, at a range of 30¼@29⅞@30¼. Among the stocks which are held above speculation, we notice Harlem selling at 132, Illinois Central at 132½, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western at 108¾.

The list of State Bonds is steady and quiet. Something over 76 is the figure for Tennessees of both issues; 58 is still the price of the South Carolina July bonds, and 19½ for North Carolina Special Tax. Missouris are steady, about 95¾, and for the rest we refer to the quotations.

Money was in fair demand at three ₱ cent., with occasional transactions at four in the middle of the day; but banking hours closed upon a liberal offering at three ₱ cent. on call.

Messrs. TANNER & Co. report very satisfactory progress in the work of marketing the First Mortgage Sinking Fund Land Grant Bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, (Western Division) which bonds are a thirty-year loan, bearing interest at the rate of 8 ₱ cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, on the 15th of August and February in each year. Both principal and interest are payable in gold coin,—the principal in New-York, and the interest in New-York, London and Frankfort-on-Main, free of tax. The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of this City, are Trustees for the bondholders, under the mortgage, the terms of which are set forth in detail elsewhere in this paper. More than a fifth of the Loan has already been marketed, within the very short period during which it has been open to subscription. The present price of the Bonds is 97½ cents and accrued interest in currency. The financial agents of the Loan, after a thorough examination of the property which is represented by the mortgage, unhesitatingly recommend the Bonds as constituting a safe and profitable investment; and as an indication of the basis of their opinion, they refer to the fact that the First Mortgage Bonds of the same Company, on the Eastern Division, lately successfully placed by their firm at 97½, have advanced to 102 and accrued interest, making them equal to 106.

The week's imports of foreign dry goods have been to the specie value of $4,099,796, and the amount marketed, $3,638,648.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ EIGHT PER CENT. GOLD INTEREST BONDS, WITH STATE INDORSEMENT.

The undersigned offer for sale a limited amount of FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS of the MONTGOMERY AND EUFAULA RAILROAD COMPANY, indorsed by the State of Alabama, bearing Eight Per Cent. Interest in Gold, payable in New-York, March and September. Issue limited to $16,000 per mile on finished road.

Ample funds have been provided for the completion of this road by October next, and the funds for meeting the interest due in September next have already been placed in our hands.

The business of this road promises to be large and profitable, and we confidently recommend its indorsed Mortgage Bonds to those seeking investments as both safe and advantageous. Price for the present 95 per cent. and accrued interest.

GEORGE OPDYKE & CO., No. 25 Nassau-st.

☞ INVESTMENT SECURITIES.

JAY COOKE & CO. are now selling the First Mortgage 7.30 Gold Bonds of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, bearing Seven and Three-tenths per Cent. gold interest, (more than eight per cent. currency,) and secured by first and only mortgage on the entire road and equipments, and on more than 25,000 acres of land to every mile of track, or 400 acres of land to each $1,000 bond. The highest current price will be paid for United States Five-twenties, and all other marketable securities received in exchange.

The success of the new Government 5 per cent. Loan will compel the early surrender of United States 6 per cents. Many holders of Five-twenties are now exchanging them for Northern Pacific Seven-thirties, thus realizing a handsome profit, and greatly increasing their yearly income.

Pamphlets, maps and full information will be furnished on application by JAY COOKE & CO., Philadelphia, New-York and Washington, and by most banks and bankers throughout the country.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

In the British House of Lords, yesterday, Lord REDESDALE raised the question of the right of the United States to claim damages by the Alabama after they had granted an amnesty to the rebels, and asked if the point is to be brought before the arbitrators in Geneva. He then made a long argument in support of the point. Lord GRANVILLE replied that the question of liability for the depredations of the Alabama would be argued before the arbitrators by Sir ROUNDELL PALMER and other eminent counsel. Several persons were killed, yesterday, by a gun-cotton explosion at Stowmarket, in Suffolk, and apprehensions of other explosions were felt. The death of Mr. CHAS. BUXTON, M. P. for East Surrey, and a leader in the educational movement, is announced. He was fifty years old.

The Pope has declined the offer of the title of "Pius the Great," during his lifetime, and had requested that the money subscribed for a throne of gold be devoted to securing the exemption of the students of Catholic seminaries everywhere from military service.

☞ The elections for the Councils General in France are to be held early in September. The Tax bill is still under discussion in the Assembly. The question of M. THIERS' prolonged term of office is still undecided. The Mount Cenis Tunnel is declared to be a success, and the opening is announced for September.

The report that the Spanish Government was to send a squadron to Venezuela to demand reparation for permitting the departure of the Cuban expedition is authoritatively denied. A diplomatic protest is to be made instead.

GENERAL.

JOSEPH MESSNER was hanged in the yard of the County Jail, at Rochester yesterday at 12½ o'clock, for murdering his wife in April, 1866. He died without a struggle, having just before made a full confession of his guilt.

The Turkish Charge d'Affaires has sent to the Secretary of State a note prescribing new rules for vessels passing the Dardanelles and Bosphorus.

It will be seen by reference to our Washington "special" that the remainder of the $200,000,000 of the new loan, after the national banks have had an opportunity to subscribe, is taken absolutely by the banking-house of JAY COOKE, MCCULLOCH & CO., and has not been turned over to them to dispose of it, as stated in a New-York paper yesterday.

The absorption of the California Pacific Railroad into the Central Pacific Road was completed on Thursday by the election of LELAND STANFORD, of the Central, as President, and MILTON S. LATHAM as Treasurer, and the re-election of the old Board of Central Pacific Railroad directors.

The schooner Favorite, of Plymouth, Mass., from the Banks, with 100 quintals cod-fish, struck on the outer black ledge, westward of Tarbox Point, Gayeborough, N. S., in a dense fog, on the 3d inst., and went to pieces so rapidly that the crew barely escaped.

Important Financial Measures.

In the Funding bill, approved July 14, 1870, and in a previous act passed during the war, there were three provisions which the Secretary of the Treasury has determined to employ in the negotiation of the five per cent. loan. The substance of his intention in this respect has already been embodied in his correspondence with the national banks. The law allows the exchange of the five per cent. bonds for six per cent. bonds, or their sale at not less than par for gold, the gold so procured to be devoted to the redemption of outstanding bonds. This is the first provision. The second is that a ninety-days' notice is required of the Secretary of his purpose to redeem outstanding five-twenty bonds, during which ninety days interest continues on bonds so called in. The third provision authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to designate national banks, at which may be deposited all public moneys, except Customs' receipts.

The five per cent. loan was first offered by the Secretary of the Treasury in February last. About seventy millions were subscribed in this country. The Secretary has now made arrangements for the disposal of the remainder, about one hundred and thirty millions. These arrangements are made with several English and American bankers, who associate themselves in what they call a "syndicate." This syndicate agrees to subscribe at once for ten millions of dollars of the five per cent. bonds, and subsequently for at least five millions per month on the average. The money thus subscribed is to be deposited with the national banks, to be withdrawn only for the redemption of the five-twenties, to the redemption of which it is by law exclusively devoted. While the money remains in their hands, the banks are required to keep with the Treasurer United States bonds to an equal amount. In addition to the advantage of deposit of public moneys, during the ninety days required to elapse before the five-twenties can be called in, the national banks are to be allowed, as announced to them in the Secretary's letter, to subscribe for amounts not exceeding fifty millions of the five per cents within sixty days from the 10th of August. On the other hand, the intention of the Secretary is to call in twenty millions of the five-twenties of 1862, over and above the amount subscribed from all sources to the five per cent. bonds. It is not improbable, should the state of the Treasury and of the country generally seem to justify it, that the Secretary may call in still further amounts of the five-twenties—perhaps as much as thirty millions—making fifty millions in all.

The method which will be employed in selecting the five-twenties for redemption, with its effect, has already been explained in our financial columns. It is at once impartial, and calculated to stimulate the exchange of five-twenties for the new five per cents.

That the conditions of the arrangements above stated meet with the approval of the President and his Cabinet may be accepted as a matter of course. It may be added, however, that they are also regarded by Senators to whom they have been submitted as eminently advantageous.

What the People Want.

The address of a number of citizens to the Mayor, published by us today, sweeps away the flimsy cobwebs spun by the Ring journals. Those journals try to confuse the public with cooked figures, with idle talk about the "old Board of Supervisors," and with still more idle promises of "full vindications" which never appear. But the public cannot be blind to this fact—that the wretched World, trying vainly to bolster up the men whom it denounced as "swindlers" a year ago, cannot and dare not explain who J. A. SMITH is, and where are the carpets for which he is supposed to have received nearly $600,000. Nor can it tell us why, "J. H. INGERSOLL & Co." received $5,003,040, in two years, or who is INGERSOLL'S "Co." or who are the persons represented as R. J. HENNESY, T. C. CASHMAN, BOLLAR & Co., and the other dummies in whose names HALL and CONNOLLY drew warrants. Come to the point. Let us know where the carpets are for which the people were charged $600,000. Let us know what INGERSOLL did for his five millions. Give us the addresses of HENNESY and CASHMAN. We say that the money nominally paid to these persons, or the larger part of it, was stolen—and all the rubbish that Ring advocates may be hired to gabble about new and old Boards, and new and old charters, cannot hide the fact that such a charge has been made, and that no man connected with the Ring dares to meet it squarely. The World may continue its infamous work of defending frauds which are so glaring as to be understood of all men—but a paper which could black-guard TWEED, SWEENY and HALL when their guilt was not proved, and defend them when it has been proved, must be regarded with unmeasured contempt by every honest Democrat in the land. The Democratic Party will probably see the necessity very shortly of establishing a paper which shall represent their intelligent opinions, and not continue to be degraded by a moribund journal hired to defend rascality.

The one question which the World cannot, and which HALL and CONNOLLY dare not, answer is—what has become of all the money taken from the people since January, 1869? Did HENRY SMITH, who was one of the old Board of Supervisors, take any of it? Mayor HALL tries to throw the responsibility upon him, and SMITH has not repudiated it. Is it or is it not the fact that the larger part of the people's money stuck to the fingers of the men who compose the Tammany Ring? Answer, that. Don't stand forever and ever pointing with your thumbs to each other, as Mr. NAST depicts you this week, but come out and say at once who stole the money. You say that you paid for carpets for the Court-house alone, $3,291,799 43. We say it is false. You could not put more than fifteen thousand dollars' worth of carpets into the Court-house, if you furnished it to the roof, and we want to know what you did with the rest of the money. Never mind about statutes, or new Boards, or old Boards; and pray do not suppose that your hired hacks, breaking their shins over all the hard words in the World office, can put the people all the true scent. Confine yourselves to facts. Tell us why you allowed INGERSOLL to receive those millions. Explain about those spurious leases for armories. Tell us whether TWEED took the money, or SWEENY, or CONNOLLY, or HALL—in short, reveal frankly what became of it. So far your defense has merely served to prove the charges against you. Your cronies in the Press have done you more harm than good. The people expect you to explain the fraudulent warrants, and will not listen to the din you get up about Statutes and Boards and Bosh.

The citizens who call upon the Mayor for explanation talk like men of business. They want vouchers, specifications, the names of persons to whom the public money has been paid, and an account of the services rendered for that money. The Hall and Connolly gang say in effect, "We cannot give you that information, but we will get a bemuddled hack to talk to you in the World, like a faded echo of Dr. JOHNSON, about the Ku-Klux bill, and Old Mother Hubbard, and similarly pertinent topics. Listen to him—he will soon send you to sleep." But the public don't wish to be set asleep on this matter. They insist on seeing fair copies of the Controller's books.

We undertake to say they will never see these copies until HALL and CONNOLLY have been sent to the right-about, and honest men—Democrats or Republicans we care not which—are put in their places, and search the records of the office. Then frauds will be brought to light which will startle the people from one end of the country to the other.

France and the Revenue Problem.

To appreciate the gravity of the financial questions which the French National Assembly have been lately endeavoring to settle, it is necessary to bear in mind that the sum raised from taxation in France previous to the German war amounted to fully four hundred millions of dollars in gold. This is considerably in excess of what we have recently been paying ourselves, and if the difference in the standard of values that prevails in the two countries be taken into account, the greater magnitude of the burden becomes still more apparent. Yet, even with the very great elasticity of our resources, and the very rapid increase of our population, we find the load of taxation sufficiently oppressive. Be it noted that our State and municipal taxes have their counterparts in the provincial and local burdens of France, so that the comparison of national requirements is tolerably exact. Had the only problem before French statesmen been to raise from the proceeds of a depressed industry and a partially interrupted agriculture a sum equal to that paid under the Empire, the situation would have been difficult enough. But when we remember that in addition to this, France is required to raise from her diminished and impoverished population one hundred and twenty millions of dollars more than she ever raised before, the enormous difficulties in the way of Government finance become tolerably apparent.

A cable telegram announces that the Government have withdrawn for the present their scheme of taxing raw materials in order to increase the revenue, and that they will meanwhile content themselves with raising the percentage of taxes already in existence. As about forty per cent. of these taxes are levied upon the owners of land in the form of stamp duties upon sale, transfer, and the like, it is perfectly clear that an undue proportion of the public burdens will fall upon the peasant proprietors, who hold at least two-thirds of the soil of France. Another thirty-four per cent. of the existing taxes is derived from excise duties and monopolies, or chiefly from alcoholic liquors, sugar and tobacco. The latter will, of course, be tolerably impartial in their operation, but it is very questionable if more than one-fourth of the required sum can be raised by any stretch of ingenuity in the manner proposed. Unless the Republic is content to face the constantly-recurring financial deficits of the Empire, it must contrive new taxes, since there is a point beyond which any tax whatever ceases to yield any increase corresponding to its nominal rise. The problem has, therefore, been merely postponed, and is not, in any sense of the word, solved.

So far, however, the Assembly has proved itself wiser than M. THIERS and his Minister of Finance. The prospect of a certain deficit is better than the ruinously-oppressive manner in which the Administration proposed to meet their new financial requirements. One part of their scheme was the imposition of a duty of twenty cents per ton upon every vessel arriving from a foreign port, whether laden or not. Another was the creation of a twenty per cent. tax upon all raw materials brought into the country. Both these classes of duties would have affected in a very direct and highly-injurious manner the development of French manufactures. To place the native producer on an equality with the foreign competitor in the home market, it would, of course, have been necessary to impose protective duties of corresponding amount upon imported manufactures, and, in the long run, the tax artificially swelled by the intermediate agencies between the Government and the consumer would still have had to come out of the pockets of the people. It was proposed to remedy the destructive effects which a tax upon raw materials would exert upon the export trade by an elaborate system of drawbacks. For example, supposing that the duty on raw silk imported was five cents per pound; the exporter of anything below manufactured silk to some foreign market would be required to state how many pounds of the imported raw material entered into its composition, before receiving from the Government the corresponding amount of duty which had been previously levied upon it. As was pointed out in the Assembly, this system would have opened the door to innumerable frauds very difficult of discovery, and the practice of which might probably have resulted in compelling the Government to pay out more than they had ever received from the tax in question.

That economical doctrines are making considerable progress in France was shown in the course of the discussion upon the proposals which have just been abandoned. M. THIERS appeared in person before the Committee on the Budget, to argue in favor of the twenty per cent. duty. In spite of this weight of the Administration thus thrown into the scale by a proceeding so unusual, the project failed from the sheer strength of the arguments opposed to it. A tolerably sure indication of the advance in political intelligence which is taking place in France may be found in the fact that such an argument as the following has been fully appreciated by the Assembly: "It is a strange illusion to suppose that we can oblige the foreigner to contribute to our public burdens. The national Treasury can take money out of the pockets of Frenchmen alone, and the only question before us is to find out the most economical and least hurtful way of doing it." A doctrine like this might be considered with advantage among ourselves, although French financiers have been lately praising us for the highly practical and ingenious character of our revenue system.

Is Coburn to be Pigeon-Holed?

It has been stated, we know not with what truth, that the brothers and friends of the ruffian COBURN, who is held for a murderous assault on CHARLES BRUNNER, have repeatedly forced themselves into the sick room of the latter to obtain his assent to such a favorable statement of his condition as will secure the prisoner's release on bail. They have even, it is asserted, gone so far as to bring with them physicians who have attempted to make compulsory examinations of the wounded and perhaps dying man. These statements may be exaggerated or false; but the gross brutality of the conduct they allege is, unhappily, no good ground for doubting them. A better reason for disbelief is that these base importunities plainly tend to defeat their own object by precipitating the death of the patient. BRUNNER, indeed, is said to have been thrown into convulsions at sight of the elder COBURN. If this indecency has actually occurred, the Police ought certainly to prevent its repetition.

We can more readily credit the assertion that BRUNNER'S wife and brother-in-law have been cajoled into a promise not to prosecute COBURN, in the hope, probably, that some convenient pigeon-hole in the District Attorney's office will there afford him an asylum "until the thing blows over." That hope, if entertained, we confidently expect will be frustrated. Even Ring criminals recognize that the day has gone by when they could openly shelter notorious criminals. An evidence of this was seen in the Coroner's refusal on Thursday of the elder COBURN'S impudent demand for his brother's immediate release on bail. The fellow thus boasted of influence with the Judges which would gain his end. Let us see which Judge will be the first to aid in thwarting justice.

The Druggists' Examination Law.

It seems impossible for Tammany to touch anything that it does not defile. Many fatal blunders in the putting up of prescriptions proved the necessity of a stricter supervision of apothecaries and their clerks. Any wise legislation on the subject would undoubtedly have been gladly welcomed by the better class of pharmaceutists, whose interests it would really have fostered, by weeding out the unskillful, and so lessening competition. But Tammany cannot legislate wisely, and the Druggists' Examination bill passed at the last session consulted, it is to be feared, not so much the interests of the public as the pockets of the legislators. It is certainly somewhat ominous that, as the examiners candidly admit in their published letter to certain malcontents, opposition to the law has come not from "the ignorant and inexperienced, but from the highly-educated graduates of the schools of pharmacy." There must plainly be potent reasons to induce these latter to oppose a legal discrimination which ought properly to accrue to their benefit, and at a meeting of the Apothecaries' Union on Wednesday afternoon some of these reasons were presented.

It was contended, and apparently with some show of justice, that the license charged ($20) was exorbitant. Considering that an examination must first be passed before a license is to be had at all, the charge for this might fairly be made much lower. The license, indeed, in this case, is in the nature of a diploma or certificate of competency, the fee for which in any learned profession or college throughout the country, does not average more than $10. Nor can it be held that the higher sum would furnish any additional guarantee of respectability, since that ought to be sufficiently secured by the examination. The proposition of the Commissioners that the large amount charged adds dignity to their diploma, is too puerile to merit or to have been meant to receive serious consideration. The dignity and value of a diploma is measured by the learning and dignity of its source, and can be increased or diminished not one particle by any money equivalent. The Commissioners appear to regard their diplomas as certain Assemblymen are said to regard their votes.

Again, since the Commissioners stickle for dignity, is there not a measure of reason in the complaint of the elder pharmaceutists that their dignity has not been sufficiently considered? Many of them are no doubt in attainments and experience the peers of their examiners—but one of whom indeed is a doctor of pharmacy—and they may naturally feel aggrieved at being thus arbitrarily compelled to submit their hard-won honors to the sentence of younger and perhaps less able men. It seems as though here a judicious discrimination might have been made, and that a diploma from any competent school of pharmacy, together with a certain number of years of actual professional practice, might properly have won exemption from the operations of the law. Was so obviously just a provision omitted because it would have lessened the emoluments of the Ring?

Other points were brought out in the discussion worthy of note, among them, that the present law failed in not requiring compulsory education or any test of purity for drugs. It was also broadly intimated that the examination was a farce—a charge, of course, which is to be taken with allowances. The Commissioners very possibly do their entire duty, but their efficiency is impaired by the radical defects of the law under which they act, that only serves to embitter and unnecessarily degrade the better class of pharmaceutists without effectually guarding the public. What is really wanted is just that thorough and exhaustive system of scientific education and practical training which in Germany and France is made imperative on the candidate for an apothecary's license, and which the Commissioners rightly commend. Let us by all means have a State school of pharmacy, from which all our apothecaries must come.

Safeguards Against Boiler Accidents.

Since the Westfield disaster, the steam-gauge has become an object of considerable interest to persons leaving or coming to the City by boat. The engine-room is constantly invaded by curious heads, which do not care to be blown off if they can avoid it, and are, therefore, a little nervous about the pressure of steam on the boiler. It is an easy matter to read the register of a gauge, but as steam-boat passengers are forbidden either to talk to the man at the wheel, or to try the water-cocks of the boiler, their investigations seldom reveal more than the amount of steam pressure to the square inch, and perhaps a realising sense of the ill-temper of the engineer. This curiosity about the boiler suggests a simple and practical method of guarding against the large class of accidents resulting from the recklessness or negligence of firemen and engineers. As the steam-gauge has become an interesting sight, let us have one placed in a prominent position on every passenger-boat, so that even the most retiring individual can examine it without troubling anybody, or exciting the displeasure of some cross-grained engineer-driver. To make the inspection more significant, a printed slip might be placed by the side of the gauge, stating the maximum pressure the boiler was allowed to carry, so that in case the register showed this limit was exceeded, the passengers might have an opportunity of entering their protest before the boiler could manifest its displeasure by a grand and fatal blow-out.

Such a display of the steam-gauge might not be very acceptable to engineers, but would be exceedingly satisfactory to passengers, and would tend to give additional security to steam-boat travel. The plan of leaving the interiors of stores containing valuable articles open to the inspection of nocturnal passers-by, instead of completely hiding them by the close shutters of former years, has been found a decided protection against burglars. So this exposure of the steam-gauge would serve to prevent the boiler from being strained by excessive and unlawful pressure. It would also be possible, by the exercise of a little ingenuity, to arrange a gauge which should inform the traveling public of the exact amount of water in the boiler, and thus warn them of any danger from that most fruitful cause of boiler catastrophes, low water. We have been assured that there is such a water-gauge in existence, but have never seen it. One could certainly be prepared by any boiler-maker, without much trouble, by adopting some plan similar to that used to show the amount of coffee in a Eureka urn. It is well known that engineers, from one cause or another, frequently put strains on their engines and boilers which they were never made to resist, thereby greatly endangering many lives and much property, so that the proposed safeguards are desirable even were it possible to guard against any future accidents like that which befell the Westfield.

It will be remembered by some of our readers that an explosion took place on the Empire City, a Newport boat, some fifteen years ago. It is asserted that this accident was caused by pushing her boilers to their uttermost capacity in order that a quick passage might give a gang of boiler-makers who were on board more time to repair these very boilers after the steamer arrived at her dock. Such criminal overtaxing of boilers is no rare occurrence. Nearly every time our Sound and river steamers race with each other their boilers are run with so high a pressure that the passengers would be sure to protest if they knew the danger to which they were thus unnecessarily exposed.

The safety and comfort of the traveling public imperatively demand that on every passenger-boat a steam and water gauge should be exhibited in some prominent place for general inspection. Had this plan always been followed, it would have saved very many valuable lives as well as much costly property.

MINOR TOPICS.

The Republican Central Committee, elected under the reorganization of the party in this City, met last evening and organized by the election of JOHN J. TOWNSEND, Esq., President. Ex-Mayor OPDYKE was also elected one of the Vice-Presidents. Mr. TOWNSEND is a well-known lawyer of this City, has served one term in the Legislature, and has always been an earnest and active Republican since the first organization of the party.

Lord ROMILLY, the Chief Justice of Common Pleas in the English House of Lords, has the reputation of being a naturally brave, witty and legislative. Unless a cable dispatch misrepresents him, he made, yesterday, one of the silliest speeches on record. He is reported as having questioned the right of the United States to maintain its demand of indemnity for the damages caused by the Alabama, now that the American Government had granted amnesty to the late rebels, and the reconciliation with the South was complete. Or, to put a parallel case, one man is largely indebted to another, and consents to the award of the Court before which he has been brought, appointing an arbitrator to fix the total amount. Meanwhile, however, he discovers that his creditor has torn up a promissory note which he held from his own brother, and has thereby canceled another debt. Seeing that he can afford to be generous to his blood relations, why should he demand justice of one, asks the supposed debtor, with rather less pellucid absurdity, than in a parallel case does Lord ROMILLY.

Instead of an ad valorem tax of twenty per cent. upon imported raw materials, the Budget Commission of the French National Assembly have agreed to recommend an uniform tax of three per cent. ad valorem upon all imports with the exception of corn and meat. This is better than taxing cotton, iron, and wool at rates that would have enhanced the entire cost of living in France probably to the extent of one-fourth more than it is at present. But it would have been still better to have brought the taxes still nearer to the consumer by taxing goods as manufactured, and so avoiding the various percentages which are imposed at every stage of their passage from the original receiver to the people, in order to cover the extra outlay demanded by the original tax.

Irish-American Catholics will probably not interfere with the procession arranged to take place on the 20th inst. to celebrate the completion of Italian Unity. Such, at least, is the announcement of their accredited organs who were most violent over the late Orange procession. Since his friends have assured him that their feelings are not so much wounded as might be supposed from the expressed intentions of their Italian fellow-Catholics, it is to be hoped that Mayor HALL will not needlessly excite them by the issue of another ridiculous Police order. It is exceedingly forbearing in the Hibernian admirers of the Temporal Power to refrain from threatening to shoot anybody who dared to celebrate its downfall, and the citizens of New-York cannot be too thankful for the unexpected moderation of their masters.

What has become of the rioters who were arrested on the 12th of July? The papers, on the day after the riot, reported the arrest of forty or fifty of the ruffians by the Police, many of them with pistols and blackjacks in their hands. The public has been waiting ever since to hear of their trial and sentence. A month has passed and not one of them has been tried; or, so far as we can learn, indicted. Does District-Attorney GARVIN imagine that the majority of that little frolic of his constituents on the 12th of July has already "blown over?" If so, he may wake up some of these days to find himself mistaken. The people have had quite enough of this jaugling in the District Attorney's office, by which a certain class of ruffians who have votes are permitted to escape all punishment for their crimes. Had the men who committed the murders in Elm Park last year been indicted, tried and hung, as they ought to have been, instead of being taken back into the empire of the City, there would have been no attempt to molest the Orange procession this year. The prosecuting authorities are responsible for a repetition of the attack this year, and they will be doubly responsible if they encourage another outbreak next year by allowing the villains arrested on the 12th of July to escape punishment.

There has been one death from yellow fever at Quarantine, and scarcely a day passes without the arrival of some vessel with the disease on board. Meantime what is the Board of Health doing to avert this or any other epidemic? Absolutely nothing. The City has not been in a filthier condition for years than it is at this moment. The streets on the east side of the town, and along the docks on either side, are lined with dirt-heaps, ashes, stagnant pools of water, decayed vegetables and garbage of all sorts. A walk through Fulton or Washington Markets, or the streets contiguous thereto, is as good as an emetic to anything that lives and breathes except a yellow dog. Around the latter market may be seen bushels of rotten peaches that have been thrown into the streets and gutters by the fruit-dealers, and have there lain for days, impregnating the air with the most noxious and unhealthy odors. If it were the special function of the Board of Health to hold out tempting invitations to the cholera and yellow fever to enter the City and take up their abode here, the duty could not have been better performed than it has been this Summer. The Board has been repeatedly warned and entreated by the Press for weeks past to put the City in a sanitary condition to resist the spread of infection. The warning has passed unheeded, and the yellow fever is now at our doors. If it crosses the threshold, the Board of Health will be alone responsible for its victims.

POPE sang of the untutored Indian, who

"Insists admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful dog will bear him company."

A like liberal theology appears to be professed by certain Christians in Maine, who insist on taking their dogs to church with them. Whether the favored animals appreciate the privilege we do not know; but they apparently join in the singing, for the choir have positively refused to sing another note so long as the obnoxious quadrupeds are admitted to the sanctuary. It is a very curious as well as a very pretty quarrel as it stands. On the principle of "love me love my dog," the masters of the slighted animals may, in case they are driven out, withdraw from the congregation, and thus cause a schism in the church. It will then become a serious question for the church authorities to decide whether the souls of these dissenters are to be imperiled for the sake of what may be, after all, only an unjust prejudice. The issue is to be awaited with interest.

We must ask the indulgence of our numerous correspondents, whose letters we are unable to print at the present moment, in consequence of the great pressure on our space. Many of these letters relate to City affairs, and are intrinsically well worthy of publication; but newspaper columns have their limits, and we are reluctantly obliged to set aside many excellent contributions. We trust that our correspondents will not feel that we undervalue or neglect the hints with which they furnish us. Several letters in the new Druggists' law shall appear next week.

THE CITIZENS AND THEIR RULERS.

"We have received the following important address to Mayor Hall for publication:

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Aug. 8, 1871.

His Honor A. Oakey Hall, Mayor of New-York City:

SIR: Inclosed you will please receive a copy of the resolutions adopted at a meeting of the Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards Citizens' Association on the evening of the 7th inst.

The great importance to every honest, upright citizen of the matters referred to in those resolutions, demands, at your hands, a prompt and explicit response. These are no matters either to be trifled with or evaded by you. The public care not for the reports or certificates of any committee you may appoint, or whose appointment you may procure. What they want, what they demand, what they must have, is a faithful copy of the pay-rolls of the City and County, showing the salaries paid since Dec. 31, 1868, specifying the correct name of the person to whom paid, his or her residence, and nature of service rendered for which the payments were made; also every bill rendered against the City and County, showing the work al-leged to have been done, and furnishings supplied—in detail—with the proceedings of all meetings of the Board of Supervisors, or otherwise, from which the particulars may be obtained as to when and by whom these bills were passed upon and ordered for payment, together with a correct transcript of the Controller's books as to all payments, and of the warrants issued from the period specified. It is only necessary to add that every citizen is deeply interested in the good name of our Chief Magistrate, and a full opportunity will cheerfully be granted to you to justify yourself as to the particular matter charged against you, if it is in your power to do so; but failing in accomplishing this by the publication of the City and County accounts, as requested, you may rely upon it that every tax-payer, for his own sake, and for the sake and honor of this City, and of our Democratic institutions, will unhesitatingly demand that you at once withdraw from the honorable position you will—in that event—have so dishonorably filled.

We shall anxiously watch your further action in the matter.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN FOLEY,
President Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards Citizens' Association.

The following are the resolutions referred to:

Whereas, The continued existence of corruption, gross fraud and flagrant malfeasance in the City Government, and financial embarrassment of the City; and

Whereas, It is the imperative duty of all good citizens to use their best efforts to secure obedience to and enforcement of the laws; and

Whereas, His Honor, A. OAKEY HALL, Mayor of this City, is vested by law with the sole power of appointing officers to enforce the City and County laws, and it is a duty he owes to every citizen to see that the laws are executed in full; be executed in full to ensure an honest administration; and

Whereas, It has been asserted by the New-York TIMES and not yet contradicted, that large frauds have been perpetrated through the connivance of his Honor the Mayor, Controller and other City officials, whereby many millions of dollars have been feloniously abstracted from the City Treasury; and

Whereas, The Democratic Party of the City Government pledged itself by the citizens in reform to the best interests of the community, politically, socially, morally and religiously; therefore,

Resolved, That it is the duty of the various charges of fraud so clearly defined, His Honor the Mayor, A. OAKEY HALL, has no other alternative but either to cause fairly and fully to meet the charges, or to resign; refusing to do either, to be deemed a default of all the City and County interests from Jan. 1, 1871, or forthwith to resign his office.

Resolved, That in the event of his Honor the Mayor, the Common Council and the Board of Aldermen, unable to refute the evidence of which they are accused, in the opinion of this meeting that the charges against them are only to be properly met by their judicial persecution, they, the present Common Council, and the officials—who may be proven unfaithful—be punished at the low Greek.

Resolved, That as long as the present unfortunate condition of the City Government and finances is continued, we earnestly advise all tax-payers to refrain from paying either taxes or assessments, except to the amount and for purposes as authorized by law, and that we further advise that no purchaser or receiver any bond or other evidence of debt bearing any date previous to the 1st day of June, 1871, with the signature of HENRY A. OAKEY HALL, Mayor, for the said City, or Peter B. Sweeny, Richard B. Connolly, or Richard Connolly, shall contend that the same are null and void, or resist ultimate all contracts.

Resolved, That a committee of fifty be appointed, who shall be known as the Committee of Safety, and in behalf of the tax-payers represented by this Association, and other citizens who unite with them, to take all lawful means to have the foregoing resolutions carried at once into effect, and any acts authorized, as long as the administration of the City Government remains in the hands of persons over all the proceedings of such officials, and to resort to all lawful means to force a faithful administration of the municipal affairs of this great City.

The Public Meeting.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Immediately after the exposure of the Tammany frauds in your columns, two separate calls appeared in the daily journals, both numerously and influentially signed, and both calling on our citizens to assemble in public meeting and take such action as the imminence of the crisis seemed to require. One of these movements was indorsed by the TIMES as genuine, and in good faith intended to further the object indicated. Both these calls have since disappeared from the papers, and for some days past I have looked in vain not only for any notice of when or where such meeting was to be held, but for any information whatever on the subject. Will you be good enough to inform a waiting and somewhat impatient public what has become of this movement. Is the meeting to be held? If so, when? and if not, why? The fact that the three men whose names headed this call are Messrs. JOHN J. ASTOR, MOSES TAYLOR and MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, is not well calculated to allay suspicion. If these gentlemen who have prayed their fellow-citizens by public meeting CONNOLLY'S administration last Fall, are presume to sell us out to Tammany a second time, we want to know the fact, and we look to you for the information.

Please publish this and oblige an

ANXIOUS INQUIRER.

[The meeting, as we understand, has been postponed for the present, because many gentlemen who desire to take part in it are out of town. Moreover, other gentlemen wished to give the City authorities ample opportunity for making any statement calculated to clear their characters before holding the meeting was held. With regard to Messrs. J. J. ASTOR, MOSES TAYLOR and MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, we are inclined to believe that they signed the "call" in good faith, and that no suspicion of treachery can in any way be attached to the proposed meeting. We shall doubtless be able to give our correspondent further information on the subject ere long.]—Ed. Times.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Last week your valuable paper published a call for a public meeting to consider the present state of our City Government, since which time nothing has been heard of it. Is the matter to drop there? or will the meeting be held, or will they wait until the fashionables return to the City? Please answer through the columns of your paper, and oblige A READER.

THE JAMAICA RAILROAD WAR.

Its Origin—Who is to Blame?—Both Sides of the Question.

Yesterday, our reporter visited the battle-field of the railroad war on Long Island, and interviewed the President of the railroad, the Judge of the County Court, and counsel for the Trustees of the village, and a number of citizens more or less interested in the conflict. Mr. FOX, in talking of the Trustees of the village; of Mr. CRANE, the President of the village, and of Judge ARMSTRONG, the counsel in the case against the railroad, professed the greatest respect for these gentlemen, and thought their intentions were honorable in all the proceedings which they have taken against the road. Judge ARMSTRONG, in his own language, says: "I consider Mr. FOX, the President of the road, a gentleman who has always acted in the most courteous manner toward us." Speaking of Mr. DOUGLASS, Judge ARMSTRONG said that "if the Trustees could interview the Superintendent of the South-side Railroad the difficulty could be settled in less than one hour." He said that as long as there were two ways of egress, the Jamaica could get along without the South-side Road. Notwithstanding the amicable feeling of the contestants hostilities still continue. Articles of injunction for a perpetual nature were prepared yesterday, which it has been found necessary to organize, as the present corporation have no power to build the mile and one-half which has been surveyed from Bertin Station to a point near Springfield. This new line leaves Jamaica about one mile to the north.

THE ORIGIN OF THE DIFFICULTY.

When the Railroad Company first determined to double-track its road, a letter was sent to the Trustees in relation to the matter. A number of interviews were had with the Trustees and talked over. Finally the following letter, which explains itself, was received by Mr. FOX:

NEW-YORK, March 24, 1871.

DEAR SIR: The Committee to whom was referred the petition of your Company for the privilege of changing track, &c., reported last evening to the Board of Trustees of the village, and the petition of the Railroad Company will agree, in writing, to perform certain acts, such as erecting a new depot, making a new culvert, placing and keeping in repair the gravel-ditches, &c., and on the evening of the approval of drains, &c., a copy of which report will endeavor to furnish you to-morrow or Monday. I believe the Trustees require nothing further than the consent of the President and Superintendent of the Company expressed themselves willing to do, as I gathered from conversation with them. They prefer, however, to give their written consent in favor of the Company only when the Company shall give a similar agreement to them.

Very respectfully, J. M. CRANE.

CHAS. FOX, Esq., President South-side Railroad.

In answer Mr. FOX wrote as follows:

MARCH 25, 1871.

John M. Crane, Esq., Trustee, Jamaica:

DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 24th inst. is at hand. As the South-side Railroad Company of Long Island will agree to build a new depot near the culvert, place a signman and repair the cattle-guard, as mentioned by you, it takes me pleasure to agree to the same.

Very respectfully yours, CHARLES FOX, President.

Mr. FOX states that during his absence for a few weeks, the following conditions, with a letter of explanation, were received from Mr. CRANE:

CONDITIONS.

1. The Company to erect a suitable depot-house for the accommodation of passengers within such time as the Trustees may fix.

2. The Company to build a large and strong culvert and such other drains as may be necessary for the Trustees may designate, and to keep the same in good repair and condition, said culvert to be say forty-eight inches in the clear, built of best brick, laid in cement mortar, and covered with substantial flagging of sufficient ground and weight of road considered, and the foundation supported by planks resting upon spiles driven deep enough deep to prevent the settling or caving of said culvert.

3. The Company to put and keep in complete order for convenient public use and travel all crossings of streets and sidewalks over said railroad.

4. The Company to put and keep in the cattle guards, wherever necessary, in good and sufficient condition.

5. All passenger-trains to stop at the depot. Enough flagmen to be stationed to guard the crossings at Fourth-street, Division-street and Rockaway road during the arrival and departure of such locomotive or train.

6. The Trustees to have the right of building additional culvert or culverts under the road at any future time.

7. The Company to grade, gravel and leave a convenient road-way, not less than thirty feet wide, along the east side of said railroad, and also along the west side thereof as far as Sutphin-place extended.

8. If the Company fail to observe or keep the above terms or either of them, that the Trustees shall have power to perform them at the expense of the Company, and the Company to pay the costs thereof to the village; and the Company further agrees to be so executed by the trustees, and the Company agrees to give a bond for the faithful performance of the conditions and the payment of the money in case of failure of Company to perform.

The directors say that they are willing to abide by the letter of Mr. FOX, but do not wish to be committed to the road with such conditions. They expect to build a depot, but do not wish to be limited in time. In building culverts, they wish to be governed by their engineer as to details, not by a contract. They refuse to bind themselves to stop all trains. At some future day the exigencies of business may require that the express and other trains stop only at terminal points, shall be run on the road.

The following letter was sent by order of the directors, which was immediately followed by injunctions:

APRIL 22, 1871.

John M. Crane, Esq.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 15th and 21st, inst., are both at hand, and would have been answered ere this but for my absence. I will state, in answer to yours of the 15th inst., that I am sorry that the Railroad Company cannot accept of the propositions stated by the Trustees of your village, never having encumbered the road to that extent at any time or to any party.

CHARLES FOX, President.

The Trustees claim that they have only performed their duty, that since the village is responsible for all damage done from the cross-ings or culverts not being kept in repair, it is but reasonable that the Trustees should guard against this liability, in the way proposed, and that only after failing to get the matter adjusted amicably, the counsel for the village with the consent of the Company, secured an early hearing before Judge BARNARD, who continued Judge TAPPEN's injunction. And even after this, the counsel for the Company was informed that the village did not desire to stand upon their legal right, and that a written acceptance of the above terms would then end the matter; and on the very day that the famous order of the Company according the stopping of trains was issued, one of the contractors had permission to do certain work that was forbidden by the injunction; and for this desire to adjust and conciliate, the remarkable order in question was issued.

They also say that those who suppose that the action of the Trustees of the village was prompted by anything like a desire to do injustice or wrong to the South-side Road are very much mistaken.

In the meantime the unpleasantness is increasing, as Jamaica has but few trains, and the Railroad Company are preparing to open a new route.

AMUSEMENTS.

Today's Excitements.

The performances to occur at Niblo's this afternoon and this evening are for the benefit of Mr. J. A. ZIMMERMAN, the treasurer of the theatre and its present manager. Two entertainments of exceeding attractiveness have been prepared, Mr. EDWIN ADAMS and many volunteer artists taking part in them.....A promenade concert by the band of the Garde Lafayette will be given at Irving Hall to-night. Vocal as well as instrumental music will be supplied. Mlle. AIMEE, M. EDOARD and Mr. G. W. HALL being the artists; and a piano performance by Mlle. KRAUSS will also be enjoyed.

The American Steam-Safe Company.

The Superintendent of the Company, GEO. L. DAMON, on Thursday last contracted with the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, of Philadelphia, to erect in the banking-room of their new building on Chestnut-street, a "welded iron and steel" vault of great size, with two thousand separate boxes, for the use of special depositors, all of which completed, weighing about one hundred and sixty tons, and costing about fifty-five thousand dollars, with form one of the largest pieces of safe-work ever sent out from the factory of the Company. The Directors of the Insurance Company appointed a committee to examine the safes of the leading manufacturers. After a thorough examination of the comparative quality of each work, the Committee decided to contract with the American Steam-Safe Company. This Company also furnished the Kensington Bank of Philadelphia with one of their first-class burglar-proof safes, shortly after the bank was robbed.—Boston Post, Aug. 4.

THE REORGANIZATION.

Meeting of the Republican Central Committee Last Evening.

Election of John J. Townsend as Permanent President, Hugh Gardner and George Opdyke as Vice-Presidents, and Other Officers.

The delegates to the Republican General Committee assembled, last evening, at Asmlie Hall, for the purpose of effecting an organization under the direction of the Republican Executive Committee. The attendance was very large. The meeting was called to order by Secretary GEO. LYON, who read the following letter:

COMMITTEE ROOMS, FIFTH-AVENUE HOTEL, NEW-YORK, Aug. 9, 1871.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee, held this day, the following preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, In consequence of the absence of Hon. JAMESON R. SCHUYLER and the continued illness of Hon. THURLOW WEED, one of the Vice-Presidents appointed by the latter, the Committee find it necessary to appoint a person to preside at the meeting of the Republican Central Committee of the City of New-York on the 9th inst., at the Assembly Rooms, Tammany Hall:

Resolved, That Col. A. J. H. DUGANNE be and is hereby designated to preside at such meeting until the election of a permanent Chairman of said Republican Central Committee.—By order of the Committee,

GEO. LYON, Secretary.

ADDRESS OF COL. DUGANNE.

Col. DUGANNE then came forward and, after the cheering had subsided, spoke as follows:

The object for which we meet to-night is to complete the reorganization of the Republican Party in New-York City by the election of permanent officers of its Central Committee. No one could regret more than I did the successive delays which have protracted the accomplishment of this much needed reconstruction; and yet it was necessary to proceed deliberately and safely, in order that no ground for cavil might be afforded to our captious opponents, no injustice be done to any Republican, and no necessary precaution omitted to secure the future integrity and harmony of the organization. Those precautions were enforced yesterday, which it has been found necessary to organize, as the present corporation have no power to build the mile and one-half which has been surveyed from Bertin Station to a point near Springfield. This new line leaves Jamaica about one mile to the north.

THE ORIGIN OF THE DIFFICULTY.

Assembly by the Whig votes of the Seventh ward. The Speaker of the Assembly placed him on the Judiciary Committee, and on other very prominent and important committees. On Municipal Affairs, a committee crowded of the ablest Whigs in the Assembly, and on the Counties, when the State was so alarmed at the outrages of "Big Thunder." The effect of Mr. TOWNSEND's work on this Committee was manifest in the subsequent legislation that put an end to anti-rent troubles. In 1867 Mr. TOWNSEND was re-elected to the Assembly, his opponent being (we believe) THOMAS J. BARR, of ancillary quarantine fame. Mr. TOWNSEND having 370 majority, while WARREN HUNT, the Whig Governor, had but sixty-five majority in the same district. At that session HENRY J. RAYMOND was chosen Speaker, Mr. TOWNSEND being Secretary of the caucus by which he was nominated. Perhaps no man in public life ever had a more constant succession of honors conferred upon him than has RAYMOND. He appointed Mr. TOWNSEND as Chairman of the most important committee of the most important committee of the most important body. Mr. TOWNSEND made an honorable record in this Committee and in the Assembly, and left the Legislature as he went to it, without ambition and without reproach. After the breaking up of the old Whig Party Mr. TOWNSEND was among the earliest in the "new departure." He was the first President or one of the first, if not the first, Republican Ward Associations, and conducted his boys through the Fremont campaign with rare ability. Mr. TOWNSEND's Republicanism is of the advanced school, and the true stamp, and we feel certain that in his selection as President of the Republican General Committee, we have the right man in the right place.

REV. EDWARD BEECHER.

An Unpleasantness in His Church in Galesburg, Ill.—His Resignation, and the Feeling that Led to it.

From the Galesburg, Ill., Republican, Aug. 7.

The First Congregational Church, of which Rev. EDWARD BEECHER, D. D., has so long been pastor, was yesterday morning the scene of an event which is the cause of profound sorrow, not only in the hearts of a large majority of the society and congregation, but also in the hearts of the entire community, which is about to suffer a loss that is felt to be almost irreparable, and which there is apparently no means to prevent. As is well known to most of our readers, some months ago, a few members of the Society sought suddenly and unexpectedly to dispense with the pastoral services of the doctor, for reasons which the great majority of the members and others deemed factious and unworthy of serious consideration. To this end they made war upon the doctor, and began the campaign in such a manner as to effectually arouse the latent sympathies of the doctor's friends, both in and out of the church, who rallied in overwhelming numbers, and, for the time being, ended hostilities by totally routing the attacking party, horse, foot and dragoons. During this unpleasantness, however, the Doctor, wishing to avoid a threatened breach in the church, made an absolute tender of his resignation. At the earnest solicitation of many influential persons, and at the formal request of a council, called to deliberate upon the situation, the resignation was afterward temporarily withdrawn and the respective belligerents rested on their arms. Since that time the opponents of the Doctor have disclosed a visible change of front in the plan of attack. Unable to cope successfully with the Doctor's defenders in a pitched battle, they have nevertheless contrived so to harass the spiritual leader of the latter host as to compel him to surrender, in the natural and prevailing hope of securing peace.

Accordingly, yesterday morning, immediately previous to the delivery of his sermon, Dr. BEECHER again formally and finally tendered his resignation of his pastorate, and accompanied the tender by a statement of what he knew of the origin of the movement against him, and of the corresponding events that have since transpired. He also stated briefly the consequences that determined him to resign.

On the conclusion of this statement he preached his farewell sermon. Notices followed of a meeting of the church, which occurred last evening, and of a meeting of the society, to be held this evening, both for the purpose of taking action in reference to the matter. In this manner and remarks of the individual members of the congregation, at the close of the services, evinced a very deep feeling of grief and dissatisfaction on the part of nearly all present.

At the church meeting last evening Brother J. D. HAND presided, and Rev. E. JENNY, clerk of the church, acted in his official capacity. The question of the acceptance of the resignation of Dr. BEECHER being submitted, Deacon WM. DAVIS presented resolutions highly commendatory of the Doctor, expressing great sorrow in view of the loss that the community, as well as the church, is about to sustain in his departure from the city, and very emphatically exculpating him from any responsibility on account of the situation, which has been so unfortunately brought about. The resolutions, which also embodied an acceptance of the resignation, were adopted without debate or opposition. At the suggestion of Dr. BEECHER, who was present, an advisory committee was appointed by the meeting, which was empowered, in conjunction with the doctor, to call a council, according to the usages in such cases of the Congregational denomination, should such a council be deemed desirable or proper. Brothers E. F. THOMAS, C. S. COLTON and WM. DAVIS were appointed such committee. In the connection it may be stated that Dr. BEECHER has never been formally installed as pastor of the church. The installation ceremony was delayed so long in the expectation that Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER would find it convenient to preach the sermon on the occasion that it was finally permitted to go by default.

When Deacon E. C. DAVIDSON had offered his resignation, which was accepted, and a vote to pay Dr. BEECHER his salary for the whole of the current year had been passed, the meeting, which was largely attended, closed with devotional exercises, led by Dr. BEECHER.

A meeting of the Society will be held this evening, when the question of accepting the resignation will be disposed of. Dr. BEECHER leaves for the East to-morrow morning, to be absent several weeks. It is presumed he will, at the same time, seek a field of labor elsewhere.

Mr. Greeley and the Chairman for the Presidency.

From the New-York Standard, Aug. 11.

We publish elsewhere two significant contributions to the political literature of the canvass for the Presidency. One is a letter from Mr. HENRY B. STANTON, a zealous and gifted Republican, who has done much service for freedom. The other is Mr. GREELEY's formal announcement that he does not intend to support the renomination of Gen. GRANT. Here are his words:

"Mr. GREELEY does not himself favor the renomination of Gen. GRANT, and is prepared to give his reasons for the same at the proper time; but, for the present, he considers the discussion premature."

There is a coyness about this declaration which makes it quite mysterious and depressing; and since Mr. GREELEY introduces his own name as its sponsor, and not the impersonality of his journal, let us see how far history will add to its terrors. In 1840, Mr. GREELEY velunteered his services to secure the election of HARRISON as a Whig candidate for the Presidency. Gen. HARRISON was nominated and elected. In 1844, Mr. GREELEY earnestly supported Mr. CLAY for the Presidency. Mr. CLAY was defeated. In 1848, Mr. GREELEY passionately opposed the nomination of Gen. TAYLOR. Gen. TAYLOR was nominated and elected. In 1852, he contemptuously opposed the nomination of Gen. SCOTT. The General was nominated. In 1856, he enthusiastically supported JOHN C. FREMONT. Gen. FREMONT was defeated. In 1860, he went to Chicago to nominate Mr. BATES, of Missouri. Mr. BATES was scarcely heard of in the Convention. In 1864, he announced his opposition to the nomination of Mr. LINCOLN, and was on the verge of bolting the party. Mr. LINCOLN was nominated and elected. In 1868, he was of the opinion that the Republicans should nominate Mr. CHASE. Gen. GRANT was nominated.

The friends of Gen. GRANT, therefore, notwithstanding this announcement, will be apt to find a great deal of comfort in Mr. GREELEY's record.

In the absence of Mr. GREELEY's "reasons" we are at a loss to understand his exact position. Mr. GREELEY thinks it "premature" to state them. We question the accuracy of that opinion. Mr. GREELEY has no right to pronounce upon a subject as important as the nomination for the Presidency, without telling the country his "reasons" for doing so, for he is neither an augur nor a prophet nor an oracle. The country would like to know why he desires the nomination of another candidate than Gen. GRANT. If his views are sound, the sooner a new candidate is selected the better. If they are unsound, let us reason together and controvert them. * * * Politicians will proscribe and bully and browbeat. The people will vote.

When they come to vote they will ask Mr. GREELEY these questions. Has the Administration been honest? Has it kept the public peace? Has it held relations of comity with the nations? Has it prudently managed the finances? Has it been kind and firm with the Indians? Has it protected the national credit? Has it in any way failed to answer the just expectations of the people? These are the questions the farmer and mechanic will ask, and Mr. GREELEY's "reasons" for opposing Gen. GRANT must be based upon some dereliction of duty in any or all of these respects.

We think we can answer them. * * * Gen. GRANT has faithfully executed the laws according to his oath as President; he has met every obligation which, as a man of honor, he owes to the party which put him in power. He has preserved the public tranquility. He has removed the only cloud that overcast our foreign relations by making peace with England. He has held the tumultuous and agonized South with a firm, steady, and yet a gentle hand. He has avoided all complications with Spain. He has so sustained the honor of our flag that, for the first time in its history, proud, imperious England has apologized to another nation, and that nation the recently-despised Republic. He has so strengthened our credit that our bonds today are rising to the highest regard in the markets of the world. On the other hand, the party which was lowest and most disorganized, and which was hopelessly divided on every question of principle, has been united, harmonized, and reinvigorated. Every question which was then supposed to be dangerous to the Republic has been settled, and settled right

THE WESTFIELD DISASTER.

Coroner's Inquest Continued—Further Revelations—Testimony of the Master-Baker, the Engineers, and Others.

The inquest into the cause of the Westfield disaster was continued yesterday by Coroner Eastman, in the chamber of the Board of Assistant Aldermen.

ROBERTSON'S ABILITY VOUCHED FOR.

The first witness sworn was EDWARD B. STUART, who deposed: I reside at No. 11 Sycamore, Jersey City, and am a ship-carpenter. On the 3d instant, Mr. Robertson, he having asked us Bremish under we for Strebel to strengt point, he can do as much as any engineer can. He put on the cap, one to the water. He perform all that necessary business. I consider myself a steam-engine; I think he is well competent to manage in ships; I have never at any time seen any of my men say he was not a good engineer. I was on board the Bonnie, as a machinist, on the day of the explosion. I was the master engineer's expert. Strebel was below over, done or me with the engineer. Strebel went on board the vessel after the explosion occurred, and didn't discover anything that would lead to the explosion; I saw the center in the strebel, &c., and from what I then discovered, I am sure there was water in the boiler at the time; should think the boiler was carrying from forty-thirty-five to forty pounds of steam; I thought the iron of the boiler was very good; didn't examine it very closely; I always examine my irons and what I consider is necessary; I was in the engine-room at the time of the explosion; I was there; I was in the act of going down the ladder; I was about four or five steps down; I was then thrown up; I had been projected and detached from the upper end by the force of the blow; the upper end by the force of the blow; the upper end of the engine and struck the deck-timbers; some of the deck-timbers were broken at this place; I went at right angles with the face of the boiler; the boiler had been distorted by the use of the drift-pins driving the edges together or enlarging the rivet-holes; the edge was warped at the end of the plate at that point. The pieces of the broken end of the plate showed that the plate had washed away and cracked on the inside surface of the course, so that not more than one-quarter of the original strength remained where the face of the plate was washed; it was one-quarter of an inch thick; in one place of about eight inches the ends looked as if the crack had extended quite through the plate; at other places the ends showed a new break in the iron, not exceeding in thickness one-thirty-second part of an inch; at other places it showed new fractures of a thickness of about one-tenth of an inch; where the round shell rested, the cast-iron saddle also exhibits an old crack immediately under the edge of the lap, extending, as near as I can judge, full one-half way through the thickness of the plate; I am of the opinion that the delay and washing of the plates at this point is one due to the strain on the plates produced by the pressure of the steam; it is probable that the point where the plate could withstand the least pressure would be the point where the plate would first give way; the lower part of the plate is in no other place, as I find any marks such as I have described; the plate is evidently from a boiler; at the back end of the boiler I found a number of these patches put on to cover defective places; I saw no such patches on the other end; I found no such patches put on the sides; I found no such patches put on the sides; I found no such patches put on the sides

PROPOSALS FOR THE WATER LOAN
OF THE
CITY OF PROVIDENCE.
INTEREST
IN GOLD,
AT
FIVE OR SIX PER CENT.,
AS MAY BE DECIDED.
THE CITY OF PROVIDENCE PROPOSES TO ISSUE ITS BONDS PAYABLE IN GOLD
on the 1st day of July, in the year Nineteen Hundred, (1900,) for FOUR MILLIONS OF DOLLARS of, the purpose of defraying the expense of introducing water into said city.
INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.
Coupons, payable in Gold, July 1 and Jan. 1, will be attached to the bonds for the interest thereon, or the bonds may be registered under existing law and the interest payable in gold, on said dates.
AUTHORITY FOR ISSUE.
The bonds are issued under authority given by the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and an ordinance passed by the City Council of Providence.
SECURITY.
Their payment is guaranteed by a lien—first, upon all the real estate or personal property owned by the city, and, secondly, upon all the real estate of the citizens of said city.
The income derived from the use of the water is also pledged to the payment of the bonds and the interest thereon.
FINANCIAL CONDITION OF CITY.
The financial condition of the city on the 1st day of July inst. was as follows:

Taxable valuation of real estate	$83,515,713 00
Taxable valuation of the personal estate, 1870	20,585,100 00
Total taxable property	$104,080,813 00
Property exempted from taxation, owned by the city, institutions, &c., but held for the Water loan	$5,481,062 00
Total value	$109,561,875 00

CITY DEBT.
The funded debt of the city is as follows:
1st. A loan to the Hartford, Providence and Fishkill Railroad Company, due Jan. 1, 1875 $300,000 00
To meet this the city holds the same amount of the bonds of said railroad secured by a first mortgage upon the road in Rhode Island, and also funds in the hands of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund of this loan amounting to $114,424 97.
2d. A loan issued in 1865 for public improvements of various kinds made prior to that date, payable Sept. 1, 1895, for 600,000 00
To meet this the Trustees of the Sinking Fund have in their hands securities amounting to $28 ,478 34.
In addition to which there is an annual payment to this fund by the city, of $20,000.
3d. A loan issued in 1869 for expenses growing out of the enlistment of soldiers, payment of bounties, &c., payable Jan. 1, 1895, for 300,000 00
To meet this the Trustees of the Sinking Fund have in their hands securities amounting to $60,543 21.
In addition to which there is an annual payment to this fund by the city of $5,000.
4th. The floating debt incurred for public works, such as opening streets, erecting public buildings, and introducing the water for which it is proposed to issue these bonds, amounting to 1,500,000 00
Of this sum the Water Commissioners have drawn $1,000,000
There is cash on hand 225,000 —1,225,000 00
Leaving the actual floating debt, say 275,000 00
As examination of the above statement shows that the funded debt of the city is more than provided for, by the several sinking funds, with their collaterals, are sufficient, without the additional annual payments from the Treasury, to pay their respective loans at maturity.
The amount of the floating debt above what will be repaid from the sale of the water bonds is so small as to make it safe to say that the City of Providence' with a valuation of $106,562,675, has no debt.
POPULATION.
The population of the city by the census of 1870 was 68,904, and is increasing more rapidly than at any previous period of her history, and there has been expended within the past seven years by the city for permanent public improvements more than $1,000,000.
With the above facts, the Water Loan of the City of Providence may be placed in the first class of securities, and is beyond a question.
CHARACTER OF PROPOSALS.
"The Committee of the City Council of the City of Providence on the City Debt" invite proposals for any portion of four millions of dollars of the Water Loan of said city, to be issued as per the annexed circular. Said proposals to be indorsed "Proposals for Water Loan," and to be transmitted sealed to Benjamin Tripp, City Treasurer of Providence, on or before 12 o'clock M., THURSDAY, the 24th day of August, 1871.
The proposals to be in the form hereunto annexed. Upon opening them the Committee will decide whether the loan shall be a five or six per cent. loan, and unless otherwise arranged, it will be payable at the City Treasurer's office in the City of Providence. The Committee reserve the right also to reject any or all of the bids at their discretion. The loan will be issued within sixty days from the opening of the proposals, and notice of the acceptance of any proposition will be transmitted at once to the party. The Bonds are partly engraved and may be issued sooner than the above time if the labor on them can be completed. Interest from the 1st day of July to the date of issue, to be paid by the purchasers in currency at the rate of 1.10 for gold.

FIRST MORTGAGE
SINKING FUND
Land Grant Bonds
OF THE
ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY
RAILROAD COMPANY,
WESTERN DIVISION
These Bonds can now be had from the undersigned, or through the principal banks and bankers of the United States.
They have thirty (30) years to run, bearing Eight per Cent. (8 per cent.) interest, payable on the 15th days of August and February in each year. The Principal and Interest are payable in Gold. The Principal in New-York; the Interest in New-York, London and Frankfort-on-Main, free of tax. They are Coupon Bonds, but can be registered, or converted into Registered Bonds, and are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for the Company's land sales. The payment of the principal and interest is secured by a first and only mortgage on the Company's Lands, granted by the United States in 1866, lying on the line of this road, and amounting to 1,100,000 acres, the railway of the Western Division, extending from Marysville, Kansas, to a junction with Union Pacific Road at Fort Kearney, a distance of 170 miles, together with the Equipments appertaining, Franchises, Rights of Way and Personal Property.
The mortgage is made to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New-York, as Trustees.
The Bondholders are amply protected by the terms of the Mortgage Deed, which prohibits a sale of the Company's lands at less than four ($4) dollars per acre, and a release of the lien of this Mortgage upon any portion sold until the purchase-money is paid to the Trustees, who are authorized to apply the same to the payment of these Bonds, either by purchase or to the Sinking Fund, for their redemption as matured. This will more than extinguish the debt and leave the railway and equipments free. The security for the payment of these Bonds is therefore beyond all contingency.
The location of the line of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad is a commanding one, from the fact that it is a practical extension westwardly of the Hannibal and St. Joseph, the next Land Grant road after the Illinois Central. The St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad is fed at its eastern terminus (St. Joseph) by railway lines coming direct from Hannibal, St. Louis, Chicago, and local roads converging at St. Joseph. Its business is therefore secured. Its connection with the Union Pacific Road opens up the through middle route across the Continent, and is of national importance. This is reflected in the fact that the quantities of letters and telegrams which we have received during the few days the Bonds have been for sale, applying for these authorities, indicate the quick response of the American people to an opportunity of internal improvements, while at the same time they make a good investment.
Price for the present, 97½ and accrued interest in currency.
Circulars, maps, pamphlets, documents, &c., furnished upon application.
Expressage relating to the Bonds free. Marketable Securities received in exchange.
We have been at great expense in the examination of this property and the bonds and mortgage, and are satisfied the investments in this Loan will not only be safe but profitable. We base our calculations on the fact that the First Mortgage Bonds of the Company, on the Eastern Division, lately successfully placed by our firm at 97½, have advanced to 105 and accrued interest, making them, rule at 10% or fourty ten per cent. advance.
Under all circumstances, we unhesitatingly recommend them.

First Mortgage Bonds
MOBILE & MONTGOMERY
RAILROAD COMPANY,
Indorsed by State of Alabama.
PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST
PAYABLE IN GOLD.
After a careful examination, we confidently recommend these bonds, because
1. They are a first mortgage upon a road already completed and in successful operation, with net earnings well established for several years, at MUCH MORE THAN ENOUGH TO PAY THE INTEREST on all the bonds authorized to be issued.
2. The proceeds of these bonds will complete an extension of fifteen miles of heavy work from Tensas into the City of Mobile, DISPENSING WITH THE PRESENT STEAM-FERRY SERVICE, CURTAILING EXPENSE AND INCREASING EFFICIENCY OF THE ROAD.
The road is 183 miles long. Entire mortgage, $7,500,000, or little over $41,000 PER MILE; COST OF ROAD OVER $30,000 PER MILE.
4. It connects MOBILE and MONTGOMERY, and is a link in the route from NEW-ORLEANS to NEW-YORK, and also to Texas via the GULF COAST LINE to VILLE, by the insured completion of the road from MONTGOMERY north to DECATUR, being built by the LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, which has direct supply their contracts of the value of the route.
5. They are indorsed and guaranteed by the STATE OF ALABAMA, the value of whose indorsement has been recently tested and fully established.
6. Some of the most careful investors in ENGLAND and this country, after investigation, have bought these bonds for permanent investment, so that now only about $150,000 are on the market, which are for sale at present at 85 and ACCRUED INTEREST, by

THE BUFFENBARGER CASE.

Testimony of the Chemist who Made the Analysis.

Full Report of the Proceedings Before the Coroner—Appearance of the Body When Exhumed—The Verdict.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—The following is a full report of the proceedings before the Coroner, in the case of PETER BUFFENBARGER, who is believed was poisoned by his wife ANNIE [illegible], the wife of Mr. R. T. COLBURN:

THE CHEMICAL TESTIMONY.

Dr. G. Wormley, of Columbus, Ohio, chemist to whom were submitted the examination of the stomach, etc., by the Coroner, was then called and testified as follows:

By the Coroner—Mr. Wormley, will you please state to the jury the condition in which you received the stomach and liver of Peter Buffenbarger?

Dr. Wormley—I received a jar, which was said to contain the stomachs and liver of a human subject. At the time of receiving the jar I made no physical examination of them or the contents thereof, and they were retained in a secure place until the 30th of May last, at which time I examined the jars and also examined the contents of them. I have found that one of the jars was an ordinary half gallon salt-mouthed jar as it is called, with a glass stop; the other was a similar jar of the capacity of about a quart; the stoppers were in place, and tied with cotton twine and the jars covered with sealing wax. I opened the jars and made a chemical examination. First a physical examination of the contents of the jars. Do you want that physical appearance of the contents?

The Coroner—Yes, I would like to have that.

Dr. Wormley—In the larger jar I found a mass of matter which upon minute examination proved to be a stomach and a large mass of what is known as omentum. The stomach was entire, the tissue being well preserved, parchment like. The structure of the other organs was well preserved, but they were all agglutinated into a mass, so much so that at first it was difficult to make out the separate parts. In the other jar I found—that is, in the smaller jar—what appeared to be the remains of a liver, the organic structure being quite well preserved, but very much broken down. With this was the gall-bladder, which was entire, the walls being extremely firm. Within the gall-bladder was some matter, apparently the former gall. After thus making a physical examination I proceeded to make a chemical examination of the contents of these two bottles separately, and for this I used nearly the whole of the tissues, preserving a small portion of each in the sample, which is now in my possession. In this chemical examination do you want a detailed idea or the general results?

The Coroner—We want the results of the examination.

Dr. Wormley—The parts first examined were the contents of the smaller jar. These were cut into small pieces and extracted with diluted hydrochloric acid until the tissue was entirely disintegrated—that is, broken up. The solution thus obtained was examined chemically for different poisonous substances in this solution. I detected a very minute quantity of arsenic—minute in quantity, but quite sufficient to establish its presence beyond all doubt. The solids thus separated from the solution were very carefully preserved. The next step in the analysis was in regard to the contents of the larger jar, which contained the stomach and a mass of matter. These solids were all cut into small pieces, and I also proceeded to extract with diluted hydrochloric acid through the same way as before, and the liquid was separated from the remaining solid matter. A chemical examination of the liquid extract thus obtained showed the presence of arsenic in decidedly larger quantity than first obtained from the liver. I may remark here that the quantity thus extracted was sufficiently large to enable me to identify it by several different tests, and the absolute quantity was quite small, as I have already stated. The next analysis was directed to the solids of the liver not taken up by the hydrochloric acid solution already mentioned. These were thus re-examined for the reason that sometimes diluted hydrochloric acid will not extract the whole of the arsenic in a time when it has been mingled with the tissue or carried there by absorption; nor will it dissolve or extract any arsenic that may be present there in the form of a sulphate, into which state it might readily pass during decomposition, from the sulphuret evolved from the organic structure. These solids were now treated so as to supply conditions for taking up the arsenic in whatever form it might exist, and the final extract examined. Of course, in the preparation of these extracts there are a good many manipulations and operations. These I simply pass by. The extract thus obtained, when examined for arsenic, was found to contain a very considerable quantity, there being so much present that one-eighth part of the final solution would furnish positive evidence of the presence of arsenic. I might say conclusive evidence, because these results were subjected to interference, &c.—that is, to answers. This final extract was examined by three different tests, each of which proved conclusively the presence of arsenic. The solids from the stomach, in a solution of hydrochloric acid, were next examined, so as to take up any solution of arsenic present in any form. But the extract thus obtained did not furnish a trace of poison. That closed really the chemical examination of the contents of the two jars. I may remark that every precaution was taken; everything used or employed about the test was perfectly pure, and each article was tested individually and collectively in order to determine that there was no arsenic in anything employed or used in the investigation.

The Coroner—Can arsenic be inserted into a liver, the person being dead?

Dr. Wormley—Certainly they can insert arsenic; if I had a liver could I put arsenic into it, is that your question?

The Coroner—No, into a body?

Dr. Wormley—Oh, into a body; certainly they could inject into a liver in a body.

The Coroner—Did you find a sufficient quantity of arsenic in the stomach and liver to cause the death of a person?

Dr. Wormley—Did I recover enough?

The Coroner—Yes, Sir.

Dr. Wormley—To have been fatal to an adult individual?

The Coroner—Yes, Sir.

Dr. Wormley—I did not; that is, under ordinary conditions; that is the isolated quantity I recovered.

Mr. Lohr, the foreman of the jury—I want to ask you one question in regard to time. What time were these remains delivered to you?

Dr. Wormley—On the 17th of February last.

Mr. Lohr—What sort of a bottle were these remains put into on the 16th day of February?

Dr. Wormley—I don't know anything about when they were bottled; I think they were delivered to me on the 17th.

Mr. Lohr—Have you a record of the date?

Dr. Wormley—I have a record; I have not referred to it since it was made for that purpose [examines record:] I now recollect that it was on the 17th of February that I received the bottles.

Dr. James Sprague, who was present when the remains were exhumed, and who opened the body, was next sworn, and testified that a large amount of arsenic may have been in the body at the time of the death, and the whole of it might disappear in a very short period. In other words, that the quantity found in the body at a period after death is in itself no proof that there was not a larger quantity at the time of the death. On the other hand, it does not prove that there was a larger quantity.

Mr. D. W. Athey, a citizen of London, who helped exhume the body, was next called to the stand.

The Coroner—Were you acquainted with Peter Buffenbarger?

Mr. Athey—I was.

The Coroner—Were you present on the 16th day of February when his body was exhumed?

Mr. Athey—I think that was the day.

The Coroner—Do you know the body that was raised up to be that of Peter Buffenbarger?

Mr. Athey—I recognized it as being that of Peter Buffenbarger.

Mr. T. M. Chapman, the undertaker, was the next witness called and sworn.

The Foreman—In what condition was the body of Mr. Buffenbarger when buried there; did you freeze it?

Mr. Chapman—I did. He died on Friday morning, and I went out there on Friday forenoon and froze the body.

The Foreman—On digging it up on the 16th of February, did you notice the vault to see whether it had been tampered with?

Mr. Chapman—I thought the vault had never been touched. It was in the same condition as when I left it on the day of the funeral.

The Foreman—Was you there when the first was thrown off?

Mr. Chapman—Yes, Sir.

The Foreman—Did you find it in the same condition as when you left?

Mr. Chapman—I found it in the same condition as when I left it on the day of the funeral.

Dr. Wormly was recalled, when Mr. Lohr, the foreman, said: Professor, could a sufficient quantity of arsenic taken in a dose during lifetime, have had a tendency after death to decompose or preserve the body?

Dr. Wormley—The effect of arsenic taken in doses so as to prove fatal is to preserve the body, as has been observed in a great number of instances. The bodies of persons who have been poisoned by arsenic have been observed in a state of preservation.

The Coroner read the following question: Taking the body in the condition in which Chapman, the undertaker, says it was before burial, could arsenic have been put into the stomach or liver through the mouth or throat?

Dr. Wormley—While the body was in that frozen condition—is that the question?

The Coroner—No, Sir.

Dr. Wormley—Independently of that?

The Coroner—Yes, Sir.

Dr. Wormley—Arsenic or other poison could readily be introduced into the stomach through the mouth.

The Coroner—Can it be introduced into the liver through the mouth and throat?

Dr. Wormley—Not directly.

The Coroner—Did the stomach and liver, from appearances, indicate the presence of arsenic before you made a chemical analysis?

Dr. Wormley—The appearance of these organs was analogous to that I have frequently observed in cases where there was arsenic present and the person had been buried for some time.

The Coroner—Would the quantity of arsenic found have been sufficient to preserve the stomach and liver you examined as well as these were preserved?

Dr. Wormely—Not as antiseptics; not as a direct preservative in itself; at least that would be my opinion. I might remark that the decomposition is not always in proportion to the amount of arsenic found.

The Coroner—Is the circumstance of arsenic in the stomach and liver in the quantity you discovered in this case consistent with the theory of its having been administered in medicinal doses?

Dr. Wormley—My impression is that the finding of arsenic in the liver would be inconsistent with its administration for medicinal purposes.

The Coroner—In taking arsenic is it absorbed in through the body?

Dr. Wormley—When arsenic is introduced into the stomach and bowels, it is carried to all parts of the body where the circulation passes, of course. It is not only true of arsenic, but it is the ordinary result of absorption.

Mr. Howson, a juror, to Mr. Cheesman—Did you prepare those questions, or were they prepared by some members of the legal profession?

Mr. Cheesman—No; Sir.

Mr. Howson—Who prepared them?

Mr. Cheesman—Mr. H. W. Smith and Mr. S. W. Durflinger.

Mr. Howson—Are there any objections to our putting one or two questions through you to the witness, after having reduced them to writing?

Mr. Cheesman—I think not.

Mr. Howson then wrote the following: "State whether or not the bodies of persons who have died a natural death are not frequently preserved for many years?"

Dr. Wormley—I would answer in a general manner again: that bodies are sometimes preserved to a considerable extent, or preserved in a remarkable degree, and for a long time after dying from natural causes; how many years after burial, I would not say; I would not like to fix the time; I should simply say for a long time.

Dr. Howson—You might indicate to the jury what your opinion is for that?

Dr. Wormley—In other words that bodies are sometimes found unusually preserved even when they die from ordinary diseases or accidents.

Dr. E. T. Collins, the family physician of Mr. Buffenbarger and the medical gentleman who attended him during his last illness, was next called and sworn.

Mr. Lohr, foreman—Dr. Collins, were you the family physician of Peter Buffenbarger in his last illness?

Dr. Collins—I was.

Mr. Lohr—What was the matter with him in your opinion?

Dr. Collins—I treated him for consumption, believing it to be a case of pulmonary consumption.

Mr. Lohr—How long did you attend him, doctor?

Dr. Collins—I attended him a few months in his last sickness—two or three months, perhaps, toward the close of it. I forget whether it was from the 1st of July, 1870, until the 1st of August, 1871, or from the 26th of September, at which time he died.

Mr. Lohr—Did you attend him until he died? Were you there regularly?

Dr. Collins—I attended him every other day for a few weeks; at first and toward the close of the time I attended him daily.

Mr. Lohr—Did you ever administer arsenic to him in small or large doses?

Dr. Collins—No, Sir; if I did it was used before—perhaps three years before; I cannot remember whether I gave or not; my impression is, however, I did not; I don't remember giving it.

Mr. Lohr—What were his general symptoms? In his way did he complain? What way did he complain, and how did he act?

Dr. Collins—He complained of a cough, and great feebleness of the system; a general wasting of the system, and copious expectoration. His extremities seemed to wear away, and become exceedingly reduced, both upper and lower, and the whole system very much emaciated; considerably so, at least.

Mr. Lohr—Did you ever see a person poisoned that had been poisoned with arsenic? Did you ever attend a person that had taken arsenic?

Dr. Collins—No, Sir.

Mr. Lohr—You don't know what effect it would have or how it would act upon the system?

Dr. Collins—In poisonous doses?

Mr. Lohr—Yes, Sir; or in smaller doses?

Dr. Collins—I never witnessed the effect, never having attended a case of poisoning from arsenic.

Mr. Lohr—In smaller doses, given as a physician often gives it, how does it affect the vision?

Dr. Collins—Given in medicinal doses the effect is hardly perceptible for a long time. Perhaps there are no symptoms that would arise that would indicate the presence of arsenic in the system, until it has been pushed to a certain extent by increasing the doses or making them more frequent. A certain impression then might be produced.

Mr. Lohr—What is that impression?

Dr. Collins—The puffing of the eyelids is among the first things noticeable when it is given in proper medicinal quantities, with perhaps some dark circles around the eyes, and occasionally a swelling of the extremities. Sometimes it is exhibited in the swelling of the extremities.

Mr. Lohr—Is there any similarity between a person dying with consumption and one that has been poisoned by arsenic, in your opinion?

Dr. Collins—I think not. At least that similitude would very seldom occur.

Mr. Lohr—Did you ever have any reason to suspect that there was anything of that kind going on, or anything like that sort?

Dr. Collins—I did not.

Mr. Lohr—Doctor, what is your opinion in regard to a person taking arsenic during his life? What is your opinion in regard to whether it would decompose or preserve a body after death?

Dr. Collins—It has a preservative effect upon bodies to a certain extent, and perhaps to the extent of the quantities used. That statement might be qualified a little. A person might take a considerable quantity of arsenic, used in small doses, and the system eliminate it as it is used, and there might be a large amount of arsenic administered, and yet a small amount of arsenic remaining in the system when it had been administered during a considerable length of time.

Mr. Lohr—You think it would have a tendency to preserve? Are there diseases that people die of that the body would be preserved longer after than others? Have you any knowledge as to that?

Dr. Collins—That one disease would leave the body in better preservation than another?

Mr. Lohr—Yes, Sir.

Dr. Collins—Some bodies decompose sooner than others from certain diseases; the decomposition commences earlier in some cases than in others; it would always depend upon the diseases and something upon the condition of the body, the state of the weather and other things.

Mr. Lohr—Is it an unusual thing for a body to lie for four years in a state of almost perfect preservation?

Dr. Collins—It is not very common, I suppose.

The Coroner—While you were attending Mr. Buffenbarger did you administer the medicine?

Dr. Collins—I mostly prescribed it, but seldom administered it.

The Coroner—Were you there the day he died?

Dr. Collins—No, Sir. I was there that day, but after the death.

The Coroner—Doctor, did you notice any swelling of the extremities during his later sickness, any leg swelling?

Dr. Collins—I am not certain about that. I don't know but there might have been a swelling of one limb; it not a swelling, there was a complaint of one limb; I am not confident enough to say whether there was a swelling or a pain.

Mr. Lohr—How long was it from the last time you visited him until you went again and found him dead?

Dr. Collins—I was there in the afternoon preceding his death; I had been informed, if it is testimony, that he died that midnight, between that and morning.

The following is the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury:

"After hearing the evidence in the case, the jury do find and say that arsenic had been administered to the said deceased, Peter Buffenbarger, by some unknown person or persons."

Mrs. Colburn will be arrested this morning.

Important Sanitary Action of the Board of Police—Additional Promotions.

At a meeting of the Board of Police, held at a late hour yesterday, on motion of Commissioner BARR, it was ordered that the Superintendent be instructed to cause a sanitary survey of all the streets and avenues of the City, and to report to the Board, on the 14th inst., the exact condition of each street and avenue in reference to the following points: Standing water, garbage, and general cleanliness of streets and gutters. It was also ordered that the report be made of the condition of the streets as they shall appear this afternoon between the hours of 1 and 5 o'clock. Superintendent KELSO has been absent from his post several days cruising about Sandy Hook, on the Harbor Police boat, to intercept Justice DOWLING, but as that Magistrate arrived last evening at 5 o'clock, it was supposed the protracted visit of the Superintendent was over, and he would appear in his office in season to execute this important order. It is the object of the Commissioners to ascertain whether there has been any neglect upon the part of the street-cleaning contractor, and they therefore omitted to give that official time to prepare the streets for inspection.

The Board, at the same session, retired Sergt. WILLIAM MADDEN, of the Tenth Precinct, and promoted the following roundsmen to be Acting Sergeants of the precincts to which they were transferred: MICHAEL W. ROONEY, of the Twenty-first, to the Eighteenth; WM. MURRAY, of the Nineteenth, to the Seventh; HENRY K. WOODBERRY, of the Seventh, to the Tenth; and JOHN B. GROOM, of the Third, to the Tenth. All of the appointments are to fill existing vacancies.

MISS TENNIE CLAFLIN'S PLEA.

Meeting of the German-American Progressive Society—Addresses by Dr. Ehrenberger and Miss Tennie C. Claflin—She Offers Herself as a Candidate for Congress.

The German-American Progressive Society held a meeting, last evening, in Irving Hall, to support the candidature of Miss TENNIE C. CLAFLIN for a seat in Congress. Dr. EHRENBERGER presided, and Mr. STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS occupied a seat on the platform. The Hall was nearly full. But few ladies were present. The Chairman said the following resolutions had been adopted by the Association:

The German-American Progressive Society to the German Voters of the Eighth Congressional District:

The progressive tendency of the time, which has given us universal suffrage without regard to race, color or sex, demands that the people themselves are taking an active part in the reformation of our political and social life, is granted the right of representation in Congress. Without the energetic movement of such a strong and powerful progressive movement there will surround themselves with an impracticable and empty phraseology, we most earnestly indorse the labors of those whose knowledge of state and governmental affairs has aided them in their mental course, and promised results, astounding in their grandeur but withal beneficial to those who have enjoyed the fruits of such labor. Without encouraging at this occasion to specify in detail the different practical plans of reform suggested by the agitation referred to, we grasp the opportunity offering itself with the candidacy of Miss TENNIE C. CLAFLIN for the seat in the National Assembly, becoming vacant in the Eighth Congressional District in the Fall of 1872, to express our entire sympathy with and promise our energetic support in such an action on the part of said lady. And in considerations of the practical wisdom and sagacity in regard which said TENNIE C. CLAFLIN has shown to possess by her different works on the subject of political reform and political representation; and in consideration of the high interest taken by the German-American Progressive Association in the question of cosmopolitan ideas as a foundation of our National Government; and in further consideration of the exertions of the said TENNIE C. CLAFLIN, in speeches and writings at divers times, we, the German-American Progressive Association, do resolve to give our united support, aid, and help to the said TENNIE C. CLAFLIN, to enable her to take a seat in the National Assembly as loyal and lawfully-elected Representative of the Eighth Congressional District of the City of New-York.

Dr. EHRENBERGH said: It is our duty to place before you an unblemished character as the candidate to whom we desire you to give your votes. The scandal-mongers who take special pains to defame pure motives, have never investigated the moral standing of the representative lady who will appear before you this evening, nor the value of the principle of which she is an exponent. Such therefore have never been able to produce proof for their assertions. The speaker proceeded to defend Miss CLAFLIN from the attacks that have been made upon her, quoting from her published writings, particularly in refutation of her misunderstood position on the free-love question, the subject of marriage and divorce, the relations of a mother to her offspring, and other phases of the social relation of man and woman. Dr. EHRENBERGH then alluded to what he termed the marked contrast between the mere Women's-Rights reformers, so called, who have heretofore filled the public ear with their empty talk, while accomplishing no real reform, and the noble and self-sacrificing progress of the little company of such active workers as the movement to which Miss CLAFLIN belongs. Who manifest their faith in their preaching by their actual practice. Miss CLAFLIN thinks a woman is equal to a man. She proceeds to prove it by opening a bank, establishing a newspaper, putting herself upon the rostrum, and by other daring but eminently useful duties heretofore considered masculine. It was true, he said, that the German mind had been so warped by outside influences as to become antagonistic to the feminine movement, though in reality no men respected women more sincerely than the Germans. The women in Germany were enthusiastic about the movement which had raised its head in behalf of women in this country. By supporting Miss CLAFLIN as a representative of the feminine movement they would assist and befriend their own sisters and mothers in the fatherland.

Miss CLAFLIN was then introduced, and spoke in German as follows:

On this, your first appearance as a political speaker, you will certainly excuse it in me if I, in accordance with your national usage, begin with these words: German fellow-citizens of the Eighth Congressional District! Perhaps I am the first woman who has ever presented herself before an appreciative public in this or any other country with words of such significant import. It is not, however, the first time in the first instance to the German people; but this results from several causes. In the first place, I am myself descended from the German stock, and for that reason instinctively attested to those of that nationality; and in the next place I know that the Germans are exceptionally receptive to cosmopolitan ideas. Those ideas which have impelled me to the resolution to offer myself as a candidate for the Eighth Congressional District, allow me, in a few words, on this occasion, to explain to you. I presume that not all of you know the full scope of the amendments which have been inserted in the Constitution; but that those there are some of you who are not aware that under these amendments woman are already entitled to the vote. The law under which I—and with me all women, in whose behalf I know that you are all interested—claim the rights of a citizen of the State of New-York, reads as follows: Article 1, section 1, of the Fourteenth Amendment: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside." I fulfill the necessary conditions. I was born in the United States and am therefore a native citizen of the same and subject to the jurisdiction thereof. Why then, I ask you, should I not be allowed to vote; and if I am allowed to vote, why may I not hold an office? Do you believe that a woman, for no other reason than because she is a woman, must necessarily lack the energy to perform the duties of an office? Or do you believe that things could go worse in the administration of our national affairs than they now are? Try the experiment merely of intrusting a woman with the performance of official duties, and if you find that your interests suffer by so doing, the power will still be retained by you to retrieve your mistake. But do not imagine that you can entirely ignore a movement which does not rest merely on the law but which also brings into the contest the best and soundest cosmopolitan ideas. Again, dare you maintain that the platform of either one of the existing political parties secures to you that complete freedom, either in political or in social affairs, which, as citizens of this Republic, you are entitled to demand? The platform upon which I propose to stand does not narrow any one of those rights so much as a single hair's breadth. So long as I shall represent you in Congress—if by your votes you shall send me there—I shall at least insist that the personal freedom of every individual shall remain untouched. Just as an Irishman or American has the privilege of going to his church on Sunday, so must the right be equally secure to you to seek your recreation on Sunday, just where you can find it, and to drink your glass of lager-beer in peace and quietness, so long as you do not disturb the public order. Neither need you entertain any apprehension that Congress will withhold my seat from me if I receive a majority of the votes. It is a part of my object to make this case a test, and there is up to this date, no law which either forbids the people to elect a woman to an office, or which forbids her to accept it. Corruption and bribery, if not indeed foreign to the nature of women generally, are, in any event, foreign to my nature. And, without having to resort to means which are unknown among politicians, who stuff the ballot-box and pay repeaters, I shall step into the arena as a candidate for the office of Representative of the Eighth District in Congress, commending myself entirely and exclusively to your favorable regards. [Cheers.]

Prof. JAMES D. EYMER made a short address, after which the meeting adjourned.

Afterward the Society serenaded Miss CLAFLIN at her residence, No. 15 East Thirty-eighth-street.

More Quarantine Outrages.

A few days ago the steamers City of Mexico and City of Merida arrived in this port, and both vessels were strictly quarantined. It is now positively asserted in commercial circles that the bed-clothes from both the cabin and steerage berths were brought up to this City four days previous to the arrival of the steamers at their piers, and that both vessels were detained at the Lower Quarantine simply to give the Health Officer's tug-boats the opportunity of extorting an enormous sum from the agents, Messrs. ALEXANDER, for lightering the entire cargoes to the Quarantine officer's warehouses at Brooklyn. It was not long since that a large bark arrived in the port of New-York from Rio de Janeiro with a load of coffee. The vessel had a clean health bill, and carried a cargo which professional gentlemen pronounced the least liable to carry infection. The bark was at once put into strict quarantine, because she belonged to a firm that had made the same promises in combating against the extortions of the Quarantine officials. The firm now assert that after the vessel had been in quarantine a few hours, a check for $250 was given to a German bar-room proprietor at Staten Island, who claims to have unbounded influence over Dr. CARNOCHAN, and in one-half hour from that time a permit was obtained and the vessel released. Other similar transactions have been reported.

At a special meeting of the Street Committee of the Newark Common Council, held last evening, the award for the paving of South Broad-street with wood was given to the Nicolson Paving Company.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

The anxiety in regard to the Liverpool steamer Queen, caused by a misstatement in a morning journal that she was overdue, was quieted yesterday afternoon by the announcement that the vessel had safely arrived in the Bay. Among the passengers were Justice DOWLING, and LYDIA THOMPSON and her troupe.

The prices of almost every kind of meat, fish, vegetable and fruit is at present very reasonable, the market being abundantly supplied. The supply of peaches is unusually large, far exceeding the demand, and on this account many of them decay, and are daily thrown into the North River and into the street around the markets, where they are allowed to lie undisturbed by the street-cleaners.

The annual session of the National Lodge of Good Samaritans was concluded yesterday afternoon. Rev. GEO. H. HICK was authorized by a resolution to appoint an Executive Committee to devise ways and means for the support of the Good Samaritan Home at Altoona, Rockland County. The Committee will consist of one hundred members, distributed throughout the country.

A meeting was held yesterday in the Mission Chapel of St. Ann's Church, on Eighteenth-street, by the Manhattan Literary Association of Deaf Mutes. A delegation was appointed to attend the National Convention, to be held at Albany, in September; and the subject of building a deaf and dumb hospital in memory of LAURENT CLERC, one of the most distinguished teachers of that class, was discussed in sign language.

The Italian operatic artists and chorus who are to sing at the festival in the Grove on the 28th of August, had their first rehearsal last evening. The hymn expressly composed for the occasion by Prof. NICOLAO, and set to music, was practiced. Weekly rehearsals will now be held until the day of the celebration. Subscriptions to the celebration fund are coming in rapidly.

We have been requested to state that Mr. WM. L.
